Some people can't stand prosperity and others never get a chance to try.

The mother of six or seven never goes lecturing on the care of children.

The Connecticut man who has offered $1,000 for a cure for snoring should turn over.

Instead of planting dynamite the English suffragettes ought to be cultivating sweet peas.

Luther Burbank has done so many splendid things that he can be forgiven for producing a seedless prune.

In replying to Japan President Wilson and Secretary Bryan collaborated in keeping one foot on the soft pedal.

It would be interesting to know what Mr. Burbank could produce by crossing the artichoke and the parsnip.

Speaking of anti-noise movements, Susan Howling Horse draws a pension from the United States government.

If Machias, Me., lives until August it will be one hundred and fifty years old. Machias, we assume, is a town that does not drink or use tobacco in any form.

Mayor Gaynor says women need husbands more than the ballot. But they will never change the inscription on their banners to "Husbands for Women!"

A Los Angeles woman thinks every wife ought to be given a divorce if she is willing to ask for one and pay a fee of $2. But why not make the husband pay the fee?

King Peter, of Servia, is going to abdicate because he is tired. Probably his liver isn't working just right. Three or four doses of rhubarb sauce might cause him to change his mind.

Professor George A. Hill, of the Naval Observatory, after 20 years of research, says the earth is wobbling on its axis. The professor's statement ought to be a great comfort to persons who are looking for something to worry about.

This is the way a Kansas newspaper deals with the inevitable: "John Smith will be operated upon tomorrow by Dr. Hotchfield. Mr. Smith will leave a widow and three children."
