THE AUMSVILLE POET

The "Aumsville poet" sat on a chair nearby—
And called for a beer and heaved a sigh.
He squinted his eyes and wriggled his nose—
And great wisdom imparted on suffragette hose.
He spied for an hour on the improvement of roads
And the swelling proportions of "these yere green toads."
He bit off a chew and took aim at a bug
That was prowling around on the edge of his mug.
He broke out afresh on these questions of note
And asked how we voted—for Lincoln or Polk?
Then around to the question of the dry and the wet
He discoursed quite freely and wanted to bet
That our state by a million would never vote down
The juice of our nation and the tax of our town.
He warmed to his subject and waved his free hand
(The other one toyed with the mug on the stand)
And called on his nose to bear witness
That he was slightly wet up with the hop Juice of glee.
"You Betcher" he said and arose to his feet,
And spat in the eye of a gnat on the street,
"I'm a man of grea-a-t nerve and spirit and force
And my subjects most freely am apt to discourse."
And lowder he grew till his hearers at last
Became filled with fear and their breaths drew in gasps,
When out of the dusk came quiet and still
The "Poet's" own wife who lives in Aumsville.
And gently she walked to the poet's own side.
His breath left his sails and we thought he had died,
But mumbling a prayer he walked thru the door
And the last that we heard was the word "Nevermore."

POULTRY PRODUCTS ARE GROWING

Statistics gathered at the poultry show held in Portland last week show that poultry and poultry products annually add more wealth to the state than does fruit, three times as much as wool, one and a half times as much as hops, nearly half as much as wheat and represents about 6 per cent of the total agricultural wealth of the state. It has heretofore been claimed that Oregon is not a poultry state, but with our agricultural college devoting time and money to the improvement of existing breeds, a great deal of interest in the industry is being aroused.
