Johnson's Portrait.

In 1775 Sir Joshua Reynolds painted that portrait of his friend, Dr. Johnson, which represents him as reading and nearsighted. This was very displeasing to Johnson, who, when he saw it, reproved Sir Joshua for painting him in that manner and attitude, saying, "It is not friendly to hand down to posterity the imperfections of any man." But, on the contrary, Sir Joshua himself esteemed it a circumstance in nature to be remarked as characterizing the person represented and therefore as giving additional value to the portrait.

Of this circumstance Mrs. Thrale says, "I observed that he would not be known by posterity for his defects only, let Sir Joshua do his worst," and when she adverted to Sir Joshua's own picture painted with the ear trumpet and done in this year for Mr. Thrale, she records Johnson to have answered, "He may paint himself as deaf as he chooses, but I will not be blinking Sam."

Wounded Sailors.

When a soldier fighting on land is wounded he is generally carried out of the firing zone without much delay and is soon made as comfortable as possible in a hospital out of range of the enemy's guns. Not so the sailor on board a warship. Warships are, above everything, fighting machines. There is very little spare room on board, and in the confusion of battle the wounded sailor cannot get the best attention all at once, nor can he be carried out of range of the big guns of the enemy. But efforts are made to carry him to a place of safety. Such places, easy of access and not too hot, are scarce enough. Of course all that can be done is done. The wounds are dressed, and the men are made as comfortable as possible in the circumstances. Then as soon as an opportunity presents itself they are transferred to a hospital ship.—Pearson's Weekly.

Community Habits.

Communities are like humans, they get habits. Each community makes its own collection, selects the particular kinds it likes. This makes it a "peculiar place"—as the phrase goes—gives it individuality, really makes it different from the rest. Now the character of a community—whether it is good or bad—depends on the kind of stuff it packs into its habit trunk. Furthermore, communities sometimes get chronic. They get "set in their ways." The habit runs deep. Judgments about things get twisted. Ambition grows tired and quits. Whatever the community is it stays until it begins to slip back—back perhaps to the condition of that rural community which finally raised only two crops a year—"buckberberies in summer and hades in winter"—Countryside Magazine and Suburban Life.

Wise Johnnie.

Teacher—Why didn't you ask your father how this sum was done?
Johnnie—"Cause I didn't want to be sent to bed"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

All Hands Up.

"At what hour did the defendant hold up the saloon?"
"At five minutes to 12."
"How can you fix the minute so positively?"
"Because I noticed that even the clock had its hands up."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—and, Son, Just One More Word

LIKE all red-blooded men, you have a natural desire for stimulants.

I'm fifty-five years young and all my life I've drunk beer—temperately. That fact is largely responsible for my present rugged constitution.

I want you to pattern after me. Walk into a beer saloon whenever you feel the need of a mild stimulant and get your glass of beer. It's the drink of real temperance. Those people you meet up with in life who tell you total abstinence is Temperance, are deceiving themselves. They're the kind that close the decent tax-paying saloons and foster the speak-easy and blind pig.

Steer clear of those dives, my boy, and you'll never cultivate an appetite for strong drinks. You've got a perfect right to drink beer moderately, but do it aboveboard, son—in the beer saloon, where decent men are ashamed to drink to excess. I won't fear the caliber of the companions you meet there.
