He was so engrossed with his thoughts that he did not see Mrs. Royalton, who had enered a moment after Flodie left, until, turning suddenly, he all but ran into Rena, beaming, effusive, held out both her hands, caught his and laid her dark head against his shoulder.

"Oh, Hall!" she breathed. Hall tried unsuccessfully to free himself. "What's the matter now?" he asked.

> He stood before her, shaking his finger savagely. "It's all over, and I'm glad of it! I'm well rid of you, Rena Royalton, and it will teach me a lesson! I'd just like to tell you what I think of you, but you're my guest in my house, and unfortunately I'm a gentleman, and so I can't do it. But there's one thing I can say, and that's 'Good evening!' Mrs. Royalton, and you'll have to excuse me, for I have my guests to attend to!"

> Almost winded with this extrava gant fury, he turned to make his exit as speedily as possible, but she was too quick for him. Seizing his arm, she looked him straight in the face, her eyes filled with tears.

"Why, Hall Bonistelle!" she exclaimed. "You're crazy! Why, I'm going to accept you!"

He dropped like a log upon a chair, in amazement. She had demolished his whole towering pose at a word. For a moment he was unable to speak.

Then she looked at him very archly. 'Hall," she said, "don't you think I'm prettier than usual tonight? Or do I imagine it because I'm so awfully happy?"

The question pricked him into life. He looked at her coldly, and in desperation made another attempt to goad her into anger.

"By jove, I didn't think a woman could-well, a, woman will do any thing to get what she wants, then, won't she? She'll pay any price, and suffer any indignity! Good Lord, haven't you any pride, Rena, for heaven's sake? Haven't you any sense of shame? Tell me; is there anything you wouldn't do for money, Rena Royalton? Let's have it!"

"Why, Hall, dear!" she replied, with big innocent eyes, "I don't know what in the world you're talking about; but I'll tell you one thing that I wouldn't do-I wouldn't give you up for all the money in the world!"

"Well, can you beat it!" he gasped, addressing a Spanish chair.

"Ah, Hall," she continued, "when once consent, I go fast. Really, I'd and I couldn't really blame him for the like to be married to you this very way he's acted. He was in an awful night, if you only had a marriage license."

ously out of the room. Mrs. Royalton, smiling, self-satisfied, stood for a moment in triumph. Her eyes were suddenly attracted by a shining object upon the rug, and crossing toward it, she saw a ruby ring. Puzzled at its presence there, she stooped and picked it up, examined it carefully, frowning, and then slowly placed it upon her finger. As she did so, Carolyn Dallys burst into the room. Mrs. Royalton hastily turned the ruby inside and dropped her hand carelessly.

Carolyn came up to her, very eager. Well, did you see Hall?" Mrs. Royalton nodded, smiling.

"Why! Didn't I say I would?" For a moment Carolyn gazed at her as if trying to penetrate her mind. She seemed as yet unconvinced. "You refused him, Rena?"

"Certainly!" Mrs. Royalton tossed her head. Still Carolyn seemed incredulous.

Well, how did he take it?" "Oh, I said I liked him, of course but I couldn't think of marrying him, and all that-he took on awfully, really, Carolyn; he begged me to have him, and said his life would be ruined and all that rubbish-you know, the "Said his life would be ruined, eh? What nonsense! You didn't say anything about-about me, or Rosamund Gale, did you? I mean about why you refused him, really?" "Oh, no!" Mrs. Royalton's tone was, for the first time, clear and honest and she now took her turn. "What did you say to him, Carolyn?" Carolyn smiled. "Oh, we had a nice little time-no fuss, no hysterics at all. it was really very amusing." "Did he seem-well, how did he take it. Carolyn?" "Oh, of course we pretended it was all a joke, you know. I wouldn't permit him to make a scene, but all the same I could see that underneath it all he was pretty badly broken up." "Well, he didn't show it much when he came to me, then. He seemed quite hopeful." At this moment there was a peal of laughter outside the door, and a gay voice ending a passage of affected persifiage. Rosamund sailed swishing into the room. She held her head up ing it with the clock. "Er of courseproudly, she seemed immensely superior as she gazed about, triumphant. The two women sprang at her.

"Oh, didn't he!" cried Carolyn. "Why, the fact is, I didn't have the heart to reject him, really I didn't. I saw that there was some misunderstanding somewhere, and we had got it all wrong. Hall's simply crazy about me, and it was perfectly absurd to let our talk stand in the way of my happiness and his, that's all!"

"And do you mean to say you said yes?" cried Mrs. Royalton. "Certainly I did. Hall Bonistelle and I are formally engaged, now, and we're going to be married-" "That's about all you know," cried Carolyn, now beside herself. "Hall Bonistelle is engaged to me!' Mrs. Royalton gasped. Rosamund

Carolyn looked at her coldly. "Rena Royalton, you have lied to me! Well, what can you expect from a woman, ABYWAY !"

"Yes," Rosamund added, "the minute your back is turned, and they'll stab you in the back, every time!"

"Why, I had no idea of breaking my word, Carolyn, you know I would never do such a thing as that. It would be utterly unlike me. I've always prided myself on my loyalty. But, you see, when it's a case of a man's happiness at stake, his whole life-why, I simply had to sacrifice myself. I'm too generous, I suppose, but I simply had to do it!"

Carolyn gave a harsh laugh, "Well, then we are all three of us engaged to him, it seems. We'll have to draw lots for him. Or else stand in a row and let him choose."

"Well, I know one thing," said Rossmund, "I don't intend to release him!" "Neither do I," agreed Mrs. Royal-

"Well, I don't mind a fight myself," Carolyn acknowledged, "when it's a question of four millions of dollars!"

"Hush!" cried Mrs. Royalton suddenly, "here comes somebody!"

CHAPTER XIV.

The three grew immediately silent, watching the door. Mr. Doremus was walking in with Jonas Hassingbury, talking. Both were in high good humor, the attorney because of his pleasant social success, the Branford farmer because of the growing probability of his good fortune. They stood for a moment, looking about the studio, and then Mr. Doremus pointed to the

"My word, Hassingbury, look at that! It's after twelve o'clock already!" He extended his hand ceremoniously. Permit me to congratulate you, sir, upon your accession to the Bonistelle fortune! It is my practice, as you know, never to take sides. Er-that is, I seldom permit myself such partisanship. So long, however, as fate has decided in your favor, I take pleasure in knowing that you are now the possessor of four million dollars!"

"What's he talking about?" Ross-mund whispered wildly. "Why, it can't be-" Carolyn began, but she was interrupted by the close of the lawyer's speech.

"It is, of course, to be regretted that one of you must inevitably lose, according to Bonistelle's will, and I am profoundly sorry for Mr. Hall Bonistelle, our host, who naturally will be disappointed."

Jonas Hassingbury, meanwhile, had taken out his watch, and was comparwhat's that you're saying?" he asked, a little confused. "Oh, Hall! Yes, yes, of course it is hard on Hall if I get the money-but then," and he straightened up and returned the watch to his pocket-"he'd only throw it away on some woman, and I'll put it to good use. It's far better, after all, that I should have it." He turned uneasily, to leave. It seemed strange that he was no more excited or exultant.

The three listening women turned silently to one another, each with a look of amazement.

"Why, it can't be! What do they mean?" Mrs. Royalton exclaimed. "Oh. Mr. Doremus, just wait a moment, please." He was about to follow Jonas, when Carolyn darted to him and caught him by his coat.
