To The Property Owners of Stayton, Oregon

HAVE you ever stopped to consider the advantages of having the principal streets in your City hard surfaced instead of the present dirt, or even macadam, constructed thereon?

No doubt, you will say it is far better, but the expense is too great; that is, the first cost. We wish to prove to you that this is not so. It is true that the first cost for hard surface pavement is much greater than that of macadam, but when you take into consideration the upkeep of macadam pavement, say for a period of ten years compared with a hard surface pavement, you will find that at the end of said period of ten years, the hard surface pavement is much the cheapest; not only that, but with the macadam, no matter how well constructed, you still have the mud in winter and the dust in summer. Another feature of the hard surfacing of the streets in your City, would be that the property owners owning property abutting on said improvement would have practically eleven years to pay for same as the first one-tenth payment of the total cost of the assessment would not be due until one year from the date that the assessment was declared by your City Council and for each succeeding year one-tenth of the assessment at six per cent on the deferred payments would be due.

On the main street of your City which is now macadamized could be constructed a two inch wearing surface utilizing the present macadam as a base. On the dirt streets, we would advocate a pavement consisting of a three and one-half inch Bituminous Concrete base with a one and one-half inch Asphaltic Concrete wearing surface. We would further guarantee this pavement for a period of five years from any defects.

At the left is a cut of a Highway built in Southern Oregon, from Talent to Ashland, under the specifications above referred to, namely, three and one-half inch Bituminous Concrete base with a one and one-half inch Asphaltic Concrete wearing surface. This road is subject to very heavy traffic and is the main artery for all tourist travel between California and Oregon. Also the larger per cent of the freighting is hauled over this road between the towns of Medford and Ashland in five and seven ton auto trucks.

Respectfully submitted,
