on one thing, if on no other. They all prohibit the sale of alum baking powders.

There must be a good reason for this. It is because alum was found to be unhealthful.

Royal Baking Powder is made of cream of tartar, derived from grapes, a natural food product, and contains no alum nor other questionable ingredients.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

Strawberry Fumes. It seems difficult to believe there can be any connection between strawberries and poison gases, but the association exists. The steamships that bring fruit from Brittany to Plymouth refuse to carry passengers when conveying a cargo of strawberries because of the intoxicating fumes given off by the berries when packed in bulk. Even the seamen have orders to keep on deck as much as possible. As strawberries, even tons of them, give off no very pungent smell, the theory has been advanced that the intoxicating effect of a cargo of the fruit is due to the fermentation of the sugar in the berries.—London Globe.

Up to Him. Coyly the blushing girl approached her father as he sat at ease after dinner.

"Daddy," she said coaxingly, "is it true that two can live as cheaply as one?"

"That's an old saying, dearie."

"But do you believe it?" she persisted, fondling the bald patch on the top of his head.

"Well, perhaps it can be done," said father doubtfully.

"Then if George and I get married do you think you can manage to support both of us on as much as you spend on me every year?"—New York Journal.

Just the Thing. "Do you think I had better give the patient gas?" inquired the dentist's assistant of his chief.

"By all means," replied the eminent practitioner. "He has taken an hour and a half of my time telling me how he suffers, and on the 'like cures like' principle gas is just what he needs."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

That Office Boy. Don't bully the office boy. It's a mean and cowardly thing to do, and besides that in twenty or thirty years he may very well be an officer of the company and your son, son-in-law, grandson, nephew or other kin may be looking to him for decent treatment and a square deal. Moreover, the office boy did not overeat your breakfast.—Collier's.

Dramatic Note. There's nothing makes a man feel queerer than to have his wife describe a play to him all wrong when he can't correct her because he told her he didn't go to it the night he worked late at the office.—New York Press.

Outmatched. "Did you hear about the row round at Penbecker's house last night?" Mr. Jones asked his wife as they sat at supper.

"No," said the lady, much interested. "What happened?"

"Penbecker tried to thrash his wife, and the police were called just in time to avert a tragedy."

"Oh, the brute! Did they take him to prison?"

"No. They carried him round to the hospital."—London Mail.
