Young ladies, between now and Saturday evening is your last chance to see or phone the people in your district and gather up all your subscriptions. You must not feel sure that you have won the prize that you wanted because your standing was such in the last comparative list of contestants. From all accounts that list will be very hard to go by as we know there are many subscriptions going to be brought to this office between now and Saturday evening.

This will be quite a surprise to some of the contestants. So now is the time to hustle and cash in all your promises. A big boost by the people in your district will help you to win one of the beautiful prizes. The young ladies who have taken part in our contest have our sincere thanks and we wish all might be prize winners, but every prize is well worth the effort put forth, and we hope all contestants will be pleased. Up to this writing, Thursday afternoon, several of the contestants are running very close. Our Educational Prizes

Free Courses in the Link Business College of Portland--The Opportunity of a Lifetime

The business man of today has neither the time nor the inclination to be a school master in his own office. He demands employees who are thoroughly prepared for their duties. The world today asks two questions of the youth entering upon his business career--What do you know? What can you do?

Bookkeeping and Business Training

To transact business with dispatch and reliability one must know all about making out and endorsing business paper and the rules governing the same. He must be familiar with the use and proper disposal of receipts, checks, drafts, bills of lading, invoices, certificate of deposit, notes and other business papers, he must know how to do business with banks, express and railroad companies, postoffices, etc., and he must get this knowledge by actual practice. All this training is included in the business department of an up-to-date commercial school in addition to the theory and practice of bookkeeping.

The system we use in this department deserves special mention. We do not use the discredited method, which consists of having the students try to make bookkeepers of themselves by conning the definitions and copying the made-up sets of a bookkeeping text book. Our work is thoroughly practical, our students keeping real books in their own names and basing their records upon transactions personal to themselves. Every record is that of a real transaction, and there is no copying of imaginary records. This reality of the work adds greatly, not only to the student's understanding, but it makes him proficient in dealing with real business transactions and their required needs. The method we use in this department is one of the recent triumphs of practical education and needs to be seen to be appreciated.

Stenography and Typewriting

These office specialties have, in late years, become very important--so much so that without them no office man's education is complete. The typewriter is now found in every business office and the dictation of business correspondence is all but universal.

The course in shorthand often constitutes a separate department, including careful training in English, the elements of correspondence, manifolding, the care of the typewriter, etc. In this department expert teaching is absolutely essential. One who wishes to make a stenographer of himself can make no greater or more costly mistake than to try to "pick up" this new and important art. Good instruction here is a saver of time and money, too.

Business Laws and Customs

Here is a special field of the utmost importance to the successful business man, which the general school does not enter at all, and of which the ordinary school or college graduate knows absolutely nothing. The basis of all business is the contract, and the rights, obligations and powers of parties to it. These receive full consideration in the business school, and its work in this line is most valuable. Too many people know nothing of the principles of business law.

BUSINESS ARITHMETIC

In our classes in Business Arithmetic we give the most careful attention to accuracy in the simple processes of addition, subtraction, multiplication and division and the handling of simple fractions. A part of each recitation is given to a brief and searching review of some part of the work passed over. By this process the memory of the student not only grips tenaciously every detail, but he acquires an accuracy and speed which would otherwise be impossible. The time of the class is given to such practical and necessary subjects as the computing of interest, discount and commissions and the reckoning of profit and loss, insurance, partial payments, banking, partnership settlements and equation of accounts.
