THE NEW IDEA OF CONSERVATISM

Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, recently addressed a letter to the chairman of the senate committee on public lands which is well worth quoting here:—In view of the general realization that it is time to make plans for national defense, I take the liberty of suggesting that you consult with the chairman of the committee on military and naval affairs to see if it is not practicable to have the lands which are at present locked up, containing oil, phosphate and potash, released under a leasing system. We have some 6,000,000 acres of possible oil lands so withdrawn that no wells can be bored upon them. Only the land now held in private ownership are producing. We should be about the business of discovering what these withdrawn lands contain. Gasoline is invaluable to the navy, as well as to every automobile owner and to the owner of every other gasoline-driven engine in the country. The largest deposit of potash in this country, which is fundamental in the manufacture of explosives, is also out of use because withdrawn, and we have some 3,000,000 acres phosphate deposit in the same situation. The development of these resources can be made effective by the passage of a leasing bill.

The old idea of conservatism, the idea preached and practiced by Roosevelt and Pinchot, says the Helena Independent, was to lock up all natural resources and sit behind the door with a shotgun. The new idea, which Secretary Lane has put into practice whenever congress would give him a chance to do so, is to permit the use of all natural resources in such manner as to prevent waste and to get full value for the public. In times like these the quicker the new way is adopted throughout, the better.

Origin of "Fusilier."

Fusilier was originally the name of a soldier armed with a light flintlock musket called the fusil. At the time of the English civil war (1642-52) the term "firelock" was usually employed to distinguish these weapons from the more common matchlock muskets. One of these companies of "firelocks" grew the "fusiliers." In the latter part of the Thirty Year war (1643) fusiliers were simply mounted troops with the fusil, as carbines were with the carbine. The senior fusilier regiment in the British service, the Seventh Royal fusiliers, City of London regiment, was formed on the French model in 1688.

Area of the Moon.

The moon always presents the same face to us, as is evident from the permanency of the various markings on her surface. This proves that with respect to the earth she revolves on an axis, and the time of rotation is exactly equal to the time of revolution around the earth—viz, a little over twenty-seven days. The moon's surface contains about 14,685,000 square miles, or nearly four times the area of Europe.

Both Bluffers.

"If I rejected you, would you commit suicide?"
"I don't know, girl. Your sixteen-year-old sister is very attractive. In a few years"—
But she accepted him forthwith, and he is working hard now to meet the installments on an engagement ring.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Great Expunger.

In 1884, after an exciting debate of several weeks, congress passed a resolution censuring President Andrew Jackson for removing the public deposits from the old National bank. The resolution as passed by congress declared "that the president in the late executive proceedings in relation to the public revenue has assumed upon himself authority and power not conferred by the constitution and laws, but in derogation of both." The action of congress made Jackson and his friends very angry, and Senator Thomas Benton of Missouri gave notice that he would bring forward every year a resolution to expunge the resolution of censure. After a struggle of three years Benton's resolution was finally passed, and black lines were drawn around the resolution of censure, with the inscription, "Expunged by the order of the senate this 16th day of January, 1837." Senator Benton was nicknamed "the great expunger." His service to Jackson on this matter was considered the more remarkable because many years before he and Jackson had a pistol fight in a hotel at Nashville, in which Jackson was wounded and Benton was pitched headlong downstairs.

A Deep Rooted Business.

"Now, dad, I'm through college and ready for work."
"Good enough."
"I want to learn this business of yours from the ground up."
"Tush, boy. I have men in my sub-basements who have been working up steadily for five years and haven't reached the ground floor yet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Louis' Compliment to Conde.

One need not overlook the enormous shortcomings of Louis XIV. as a man and as a king to admit that in some important respects he "tried to do his duty." He was a hard working sovereign both in the sphere of administration and in that social sphere which was to his mind no less important. So courteous that he never passed the poorest woman about the palace without lifting his hat, he carried polite consideration to the level of a fine art. In the way of courteous speech there are few things nobler than his remark to the great Conde as the old hero was slowly ascending the great marble staircase at Versailles. Conde apologized for being so long in mounting the steps, at the top of which the king stood waiting. "Ah, cousin," Louis replied, "one moves slowly when one is laden with laurels."

Satisfied.

"I was brought up on a farm, and I'm glad of it."
"Yes?"
"You bet your life! Whenever I think I'm working too hard I just stop and think of the time when I had to get up at 4 o'clock and work like a slave until dark."—New York World.

Proved His Case.

Mother—The whipping you had yesterday does not seem to have improved you. Your behavior has been even worse today. Willie—That's what I wanted to prove. You said I was as bad as I possibly could be yesterday. I knew you were wrong.
