MINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY.
Seville Has a Treasure House Packed With Authentic Facts.
In the historic Spanish city of Seville, near the famous cathedral and occupying a frontage of about 200 feet, stands a building that is of paramount interest to the people of practically all the American republics. Because of the contents of this building Seville is becoming the Mecca of American historians.
The structure is a veritable treasure house of authentic facts concerning the colonial period of all the Spanish speaking countries of the new world as well as a mine of information relative to the early history of a very large part of the United States.
The house is known as the Casa Lonja, and the treasures it contains consist of the general archives of the Indies, that wonderful collection of unpublished, unedited and for the most part even unindexed original documents, reports, letters, etc., which practically embrace the administration of the colonies under the dominion of Spain in all the Americas.
The mother country kept in very close touch with her children across the sea, and these detailed reports, contracts, cedulas and legal documents of every kind, as well as thousands of letters of officials—private and confidential as well as of a public character—form an almost inexhaustible mine of historical facts.—Exchange.

INSTINCT OF THE SPIDERS.
They All Knew How to Land When Cast Adrift Upon the Waters.
I took a large spider from his web under the basement of a mill, put him on a chip and set him adrift on the quiet waters of the pond. He walked all about the sides of his bark, surveying the situation very carefully, and when the fact that he was really adrift and about a yard from shore seemed to be fully comprehended he looked out for the nearest land.
This point fairly settled upon, he immediately began to cast a web for it. He threw it as far as possible in the air and with the wind. It soon reached the shore and made fast to the spires of grass. Then he turned himself about and in true sailor fashion began to haul in hand over hand on his cable. Carefully he drew upon it until his bark began to move toward the shore. As it moved the faster he the faster drew upon it to keep his bawser taut and from touching the water. Very soon he reached the shore, and, quickly leaping to terra firma, he spied his way homeward.
Thinking that he might be a special expert and an exception in that line of seamanship to the rest of his companions, I tried several of them. They all came to shore in like manner.—Virginia Pilot.

Radium Cures Cancer.
Practically all experimenters have demonstrated one basic fact—that radium does destroy cancer cells without producing any disintegrating effect upon normal tissue. The radium molecule is the only agent known to man which succeeds in doing this. Of that supremely important fact there is no longer the slightest room for doubt—that is to say, if the radium rays could be brought to bear upon every cancer cell this scourge would vanish from the world. The reasons that its use does not always succeed are many and too intricate for description in this place. But the records of so many positive cures are now available, cures of cancers usually regarded as hopeless and inoperable, that we must finally conclude that medical science has obtained a powerful weapon in its struggle with this disease.—World's Work.

The Rocks Rebelled.
In the early days of missions in Persia the people were naturally suspicious of the missionaries and were constantly on the lookout for something in their houses which would exert a baleful influence upon native visitors. A Persian lady, calling one day on an American missionary lady, wished to sit in a rocking chair, which was something she had never seen before. She got up into it with her feet and attempted to squat upon her heels, as she would have done upon the floor, with the result that she and the chair both took a tumble backward. Hence there went abroad a report that the missionaries kept in their houses a machine for converting people to Christianity.—Los Angeles Times.

Won't Need a Gun.
Mrs. Irons—So you aren't afraid of burglars? No doubt your husband has a revolver?
Mrs. Lyons—Yes, but I'm so afraid of firearms that I have hidden it.
Mrs. Irons—Then what protection would you have in case of a robbery?
Mrs. Lyons—My dear, the way that man will roar at me when he can't find that gun will scare any burglar out of his wits.—London Answers.

Human Faces.
Dreadful limits are set in nature to the powers of dissimulation. Truth tyrannizes over the unwilling members of the body. Faces never lie, it is said. No man need be deceived who will study the changes of expression.—Emerson.

"Where Mac was; it sounded like a movie plot."—Life.

A ROMANCE OF TRADE.
The Start and Rise of the Famous Krupp Gun Works.
The famous cannon foundry of Krupp, at Essen, was established in 1811 by Frederick Krupp, who abandoned a successful grocery business at the instigation of two brothers named Von Kechel in order to devote himself to the manufacture of cast steel.
The process was then unknown in Germany, and the article itself went under the name of "English steel" because it was imported from England. Krupp had money, and the Kechels had or pretended to have technical knowledge. The firm started its operations in an old water power mill at Altenessen. The experiments of the Von Kechels were unsuccessful. For nearly two years they did their best, but all their efforts to produce "English steel" failed. In the end Krupp decided to get rid of them after having spent one-half of his fortune in experiments and took over the management of the work himself.
For a long time he had no luck, and it was only after some years of disappointment and labor that a satisfactory metal was produced. It was under his son Alfred that the business first really began to flourish. Its exhibit at the London exposition of 1851 revealed to the world that a little known German firm was producing iron and steel that could not be bettered by the industry of any other country. Orders from the Prussian government followed, and the name and fortune of the firm were made.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

LIGHTS OF THE NIGHT.
The Heavens Shine as Ever, While This Old World Changes.
Night is the astronomer's accepted time. He goes to his delightful labors when the day world goes to its rest. A dark fall spreads over the resorts of active life; terrestrial objects, hill and valley, and rock and stream, and the abodes of men disappear; but the curtain is drawn up which concealed the heavenly hosts.
There they shine and there they move as they moved and shone to the eyes of Newton and Galileo, of Kepler and Copernicus, of Ptolemy and Hipparchus—yes, as they moved and shone when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy.
All has changed on earth, but the glorious heavens remain unchanged. The plow passes over the site of mighty cities; the homes of powerful nations are desolate; the languages they spoke are forgotten, but the stars that shone for them are shining for us; the same eclipses run their steady circle; the same equinoxes call out the flowers of spring and send the husbandman to the harvest; the sun passes at either tropic as he did when his course began, and sun and moon, and planet and satellite, and star and constellation and galaxy, still bear witness to the power, the wisdom and the love which placed them in the heavens and upholds them there.—Everett.

The Judge Silenced.
In the famous trial of the dean of St. Asaph, Mr. Erskine, the great English lawyer, put a question to the jury relative to the meaning of their verdict. Justice Buller objected to his propriety. The counsel reiterated his question and demanded an answer. The judge again interposed his authority in these emphatic words:
"Sit down, Mr. Erskine. Know your duty or I shall be obliged to make you know it."
Mr. Erskine, with equal warmth, replied: "I know my duty as well as your lordship knows your duty. I stand here as the advocate of a fellow citizen, and I will not sit down."
The judge was silent, and the advocate persisted in his questions.—London Opinion.

Human Horns.
In the anatomical museum of the Edinburgh university four horns are preserved which had grown upon human heads. One of these is about seven inches long, as thick as the little finger and crooked in shape. A label attached to it bears this inscription: "This horn was cut by Arthur Temple, chirologer, out of the head of Elizabeth Low, being three inches above the right ear, before witnesses, the 14th of May, 1671. It was a growing seven years. Her age is fifty years."
The three other human horns also graced the heads of ladies.

Shakespeare and the Rose.
The rose must have been Shakespeare's favorite flower, for one with so catholic a taste can be said to have favored one above another. He speaks of it at least eighty times, using it in several cases as the symbol of perfection, as where Ophelia describes Hamlet as "the rose of the fair state."

As He Golfed.
"I just now met Blodson. He said he was going out to play a little golf."
"He probably told the truth. Blodson can go through more motions and play less golf than any other man of my acquaintance."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Cynical.
Sillicus—So you think their friendship will end in marriage, eh? Cynicus—Yes, I guess that will be the end of it.—Town Topics.

Starting Her.
Judge—Madam, have you anything to say? Prisoner's Husband—Goodness, Judge! Now you're done it.—Life.
