Expects Oregon to Be in Lead Again

Portland, Ore., Jan. 29.—The United States Food Administration is looking to Oregon and the other Pacific Coast states for a record conservation of pork and all hog products during the next few weeks. Now that all restrictions of mutton and beef are suspended in the Coast States until March 13, these states are expected to not only rigidly observe the two porkless days each week and one porkless meal each day of the national conservation schedule, but to do even better.

"Because of temporary traffic congestion and the consequent accumulation of beef and mutton in the Coast States," said Federal Food Administrator Ayer in an interview, "The Food Administration has suspended the restrictions on these meats until March 13, and the people of Oregon may now have beef, mutton, veal and lamb even on 'meatless' days until the date named. This is a privilege which the rest of the country is not enjoying, and for that reason Oregon citizens should not only observe the schedule strictly as to its two porkless days each week and one porkless meal each day, but should voluntarily do even better than this in saving pork. Since beef and mutton are now freely available until March 13, it would be no hardship for Oregon families to use no pork at all for this period. On 'porkless' days and at 'porkless' meals no pork, ham, bacon, sausage, lard or other hog product should be used. Tuesdays and Saturdays are the official 'porkless' days."

Patrolmen for Marion Co. Roads

Under the law passed at the last session of the legislature the road supervisors were done away with and in their places there are patrolmen appointed by the county court who serve under the direction of the county road master. They are required to make monthly reports to him stating the character of their employment for each working day.

The list in this vicinity to date is as follows:

- 22—C. J. Ramsden, McCleay, Rt. 1.
- 23—Chas. Heater, Sublimity.
- 23—J. B. Van Handle, Stayton
- 25—H. C. Von Behren, Aumsville.
- 32—L. S. Lambert, Stayton.
- 33—Geo. A. Etzel, Stayton Rt 1
- 33 1-2—Wm. Berringer, Mehama.
- 34—G. S. Barham, Mehama.
- 35—Conrad Miller, Gates.
- 40—E. J. Richards, Mill City.
- 66—Leonard Walker, West Stayton.
- 68—W. H. Loose, Stayton.
- 70—E. C. Downing, Sublimity.

In a letter to a Stayton friend, Jonas Sheard writes from Long Beach that he is "still enjoying the pleasures of a winter in sunny southern California. It has only rained twice here since I came down last August and that was only for an hour or two for two nights about three months apart." He says that in the gardens there one can see tomato plants growing with everything on them from the blossom to the fully ripe tomato. In the markets are strawberries (18c a box and not quite as nice a flavor as friend Fitton's berries) also peas, lettuce, onions, radishes, turnips, new potatoes, etc. He has an excellent position in the woolen mills at Long Beach and says he is contented and happy, the only thing lacking being the esteemed friends he left in Stayton and Sublimity. In his opinion "there is something about Stayton and its people that makes one feel as though it was his home town."

More Wheat, More Sugar to be Saved

Portland, Ore. Jan. 29—More wheat, more sugar and more pork must be saved.

This is the edict of the U. S. Food Administration, and the new "Home Card," which will be sent out from Washington within the next few days will outline a new schedule, with further restrictions on the use these three staples. The new card is to replace, in some 13,000,000 kitchens of the United States, the original "Home Card" which was given out when 13,000,000 housewives signed the Food Administration conservation pledge about three months ago.

W. B. Ayer, Federal Food Administrator for Oregon, announces that these new "Home Cards" will be ready for distribution in this state next month, and that simultaneously with the adoption of the new schedule of wheatless and porkless days in the home, the new restrictions will apply to all hotels, restaurants, cafeterias and boarding houses.
