as the burning gas left a stream of fire some distance behind the car. The car came to a stop as soon as the ladies noticed their danger. They jumped from the car and screamed. The fire ladders soon extinguished the flames. The damage was about $200, and no insurance. The cause of the fire was a loose connection, thus allowing the gas to escape which came in contact with the exhaust pipe and ignited, and the heat from this melted the pipe carrying the gasoline.

COUNTRY'S DEBT TO CRIMINAL

Notorious French Swindler Responsible for Development of Most Famous Fighting Airplane.

The most successful fighting airplane in the world today is without question the Spad. It was, of course, the mount of the late Captain Guynemer, who, it will be remembered, accounted for 53 machines before being shot down last September just behind the German front line. The most proficient pilots in the Lafayette escadrille also use this machine.

The history of the Spad is curious. It owes its origin to Armand Deperdussin, a former silk merchant of Lyons, who amassed a large fortune by a series of swindling operations. In 1910 he proceeded to sink most of his gains into aviation, establishing a huge flying field and factory near Reims and engaging a brilliant young engineer named Bechereau. The result was that the Deperdussin monoplane acquired an international fame, winning the Gordon Bennett cup at Chicago in 1912 and at Reims in 1913—the latter event at the rate of 124.5 miles an hour. This speed was made possible largely by the monocoque construction of the fuselage, greatly superior to the rectangular body section then in vogue on other machines.

After the arrest of Deperdussin some time before the war the directors of the firm retained Bechereau as designer and changed the name to Spad (Societe pour Aeroplanes Deperdussin). This was again changed quite recently to "Societe pour l'Aviation et ses Derives," keeping the same initials as before. Deperdussin's trial finally took place a few months back and a merely nominal sentence was imposed on account of the great services to the cause of French aviation rendered by the defendant.

CONTROL YOUR OWN KITCHEN

Ringling Message Addressed to the Women of American by One of Their Best-Known Writers.

Margaret Deland, the well-known writer, says in the Woman's Home Companion:

"This is a brave world just now, and it shames us to admit, even to ourselves, how we hate to face some domestic guns; we hate to ask about left-over dropped eggs; and still more do we flunk the going back to the good sense of mothers and grandmothers, and do our own ordering! There is, however, one thing that would help us poor housekeepers immensely, namely, a community effort! If groups of women—the women's clubs, the women of a parish, the women of a street—would get together, and pledge each other their moral support, the domestic situation would be immensely helped; we would cease to be bullied by our kitchens. Once let Mary realize that not only Mrs. A. is 'mean,' and Mrs. B. 'snoops around in the refrigerator,' and Mrs. C. 'gives ye a calldown about yer potato parings,' but that the whole alphabet of housekeepers will not permit waste, Mary, too, and all her kind, will finally fall into line!"

"You know the fable of the old man and his sons and the sticks? The single stick was easily broken. The single housekeeper is easily cowed. The fagot is unbreakable! If we women, all together, insist upon a moral, social, economical course, our kitchens will join us."

Turkey Takes Census.

For the first time in the history of Turkey, says an Amsterdam dispatch, a complete census of the whole empire is to be taken. A German statistician has been appointed to superintend the preliminary formalities. The Turkish newspaper, Sabah, says: "We are the only nation in Europe, not excluding even the Balkan states, which possesses no official statistics of our population." The estimated population of Turkey before the war was roughly 21,000,000, of which 7,000,000 were Turks, 9,000,000 Arabs, 1,500,000 Armenians, 1,500,000 Greeks, 1,500,000 Kurds, and the remainder Druses, Jews and the smaller tribes. The Turkish newspapers have recently shown some anxiety as to the large decrease in population lately caused by the war and the prevalence of disease and have urged the government to take steps to decrease mortality and increase the birth rate.

Teeth Frozen.

This happened when zero weather prevailed and the victim was Clifford Althaus, county recorder of Clark county. When he woke up one of those cold mornings, his teeth were certainly not chattering with cold, he says, for they were frozen tight and he could not move them until they had been thawed out. You see he placed them in a glass of water and the water was a solid cake of ice.—Indianapolis News.
