

DAIRYING AND BANKING
There is not a bank in the world that will allow a man to take out more money continually unless he puts back equal amounts. It would be a financial impossibility. In exactly the same way, there is not a dairy cow that will allow a dairyman to take milk and butter fat from her without putting back its equivalent in nutrients. The banker requires deposits of cash. The dairy-cow requires deposits of nutritious, well balanced feed. Every farmer who will make a success with his cow or his cows, must know feed and methods of feeding, and he must not stint.

WANT DAIRY PRODUCTS

The United States department of agriculture believes that there will continue to be an abnormal demand for dairy products in Europe for a year or more. While uncertain as to the European demand for American beef, the department does believe that the demand will be any less than it was just prior to the war when the amount required by Europe was from 150,000,000 to over 700,000,000 pounds a year.

FEED GOOD COW MORE

There is sometimes a tendency to feed the high producing milk cow less feed than the low producing cow merely because she seems more able to produce more milk on a given amount of feed. This is poor economy on any farm. The milk cow is nothing more nor less than a machine for the production of milk. The feed that she gets is utilized for only two purposes. First bodily maintenance and second milk production. The high producing cow is the one that requires a minimum amount of feed to maintain bodily efficiency and is able to convert the maximum of feed into milk without laying on fat. The low producing cow may be a low producer for one or two reasons, namely that it requires a large amount of feed to maintain bodily efficiency or that she stores up fat with the surplus feed instead of converting it into milk. The logical thing to do is to eliminate the low producer and increase the feed, properly balanced, to the high producing cow.

Men May Reenlist for Direct Duty in France With the U. S. Marines

Discharged soldiers and marines may enlist for direct duty overseas from now until fall, at which time they will be returned to the United States and discharged. The object of this splendid offer of a five months trip to France is to relieve the Marines now serving in the Army of Occupation, who have been overseas for the past two years. This is an opportunity of a lifetime for an ex-soldier or marine who served his time in the states to take that much desired trip to France, with the assurance of a discharge upon returning in the fall. This offer does not hold good for long, so take advantage now. Application may be made to any postmaster or Marine Recruiting Station.

Four year enlistments are also being made of men between the ages of seventeen years up to the age of forty years who have had no previous military service, for duty in the United States and abroad. The pay of a private in the Marine Corps is thirty dollars a month, with clothes and medical attention furnished free.

Sixteen more musicians are needed at the present time for the famous Mare Island Marine Band and applications will be received at any post office or Marine Recruiting Station.

Any further information regarding the "Devil Dogs" will be gladly furnished by the Marine Recruiting Station, 3rd and Alder Streets, Portland, Oregon, or any postmaster.

WITH THE DAIRY HERD

We would not like very well to have nothing but potatoes to eat day in and day out, and our health would suffer from such diet. Yet we often fail to realize that the cow needs a variety of diet, both from the standpoint of palatability and production.

The day of the scrub cow is fast passing, but none too fast. The farm cow with a yield of a gallon of milk a day is not good enough, yet that number has been legion. Which is cheaper to own, three cows that yield a gallon each per day or one cow that yields three gallons.

Succulence is a necessity for good dairy production the year around. Water at the trough will not give the same result as in the succulent feed even though the feed contains the same nutrients.

How fine it would be if corn and oats and peas and the like grew the year round? This condition may be approximated by the use of a silo.

Don't raise a calf from just any sire that happens to be in the community. See to it that, if your cow is any good at all, her calf is from a first class bull. If she isn't any good get rid of her and get one that is for you can't afford to raise a calf from a useless cow.

AMONG THE LIVESTOCK

A little care early in the season will often prevent serious trouble and no end of agony to the horses from sore shoulders.

Don't let the manure accumulate in the open during the summer, where it will become a breeding place for flies and be a general nuisance.

Some first class authorities on feeding recommend that no hay be given the teams during the noon hour, but that a liberal feed of grain only be fed. There is difference in opinion on this point, however.

Every farmer should have a supply of standard remedies and appliances for treating the common ailments of the cows, horses, pigs, sheep or chickens. Lack of one of them might cost the life of a valuable animal or a considerable veterinary bill.

Salt is one of the cheapest of the necessities on the farm when its value is taken into consideration. There should be no time when any of the stock are without a supply of it where they can get to it at will. For they know better than anyone else when they need it and how much.

THE POULTRY YARD

The early hen gets the worm.

The hen's teeth are in her gizzards. Give her grit.

Some hens lay 300 eggs a year; many lay 200; multitudes of them should be bred up and cared for so as to approximate this latter number.

Place the feed so that the hens must take lots of exercise in getting it. The fat hen is good to eat, but that's all.
