

Widow Of Millionaire Found Dead In Bed With Head Crushed

San Mateo, Cal., June 4.—Mrs. Sarah Coburn, widow of Loren Coburn, eccentric millionaire, was found dead in her bed at her Pescadero home this morning; her head crushed.

Strapping over the body, shaking the battered body and muttering incoherently, was Wallace Coburn, 60, son of Coburn by a former marriage, who was adjudged mentally incompetent and committed to a guardian's care.

A bloodstained club was found near the bed.

A neighbor, calling at the house on an errand, heard the man's babbings and investigated.

"Wake up, wake up now," Coburn repeated over and over, according to this neighbor. The aged incompetent paid no attention to the intrusion by neighbors and officers until he was taken for questioning by the officers.

Thus far, they have heard nothing intelligent from him.

Mrs. Coburn recently won the greater part of Coburn's estate after a bitter court fight at Redwood City. A nephew, contesting the suit, alleged Coburn was of unsound mind when he married and made his will.

HOME-MAKING NOT SO EASY

Housewife Seems to Be Right When She Condemns Ideas Formulated by the Theorists.

"I am always amused," said the housewife, according to the New York Evening Post, "at the proposition we so often read and hear that munition and factory girls enter domestic service. The theorists seem to imagine that such a change can be accomplished right about face—overnight, in the twinkling of an eye. Good housework, of the sort that should be our standard, is not so easy as all that. While I don't consider that housework requires lifelong training, yet never have I taken a girl from a factory who knew the difference between a cloth for washing dishes and one for wiping floors. As a rule a factory girl is ignorant of the simplest sanitary essentials that stand for home making. Cooking she may be taught, and cleaning she may learn, but the basic principles and habit are not picked up so readily. Many a time have I said to a maid: 'Had you gone to kindergarten you would never have piled your dishes and saucers like that.' It was at a kindergarten conference in California, you may recall, where it was said that no convicted criminal in that state had had kindergarten training. Besides their uncertain help in the homes of others think how wanting in their own homes—when they get them—these young factory girls will be—unless they pick up considerably more knowledge about domestic ways and means."

HAS SOMETHING OF A JOB

Bill Is Finding That Thinking Up an Explanation Is by No Means an Easy Task.

Bill Dudley and eleven other pinocle players who are members of a progressive pinocle club left their South side homes to go to Beech Grove the other night. While at Fountain square waiting for the Beech Grove car Bill and Joe Beck got too far away from the car to catch it and the other ten went to Beech Grove. Then Bill got an idea and he and Beck stole home to where Bill's car rested—for his wife won't let him take it out after dark. They opened the garage door noiselessly, pushed the car out and down the street for a block and then stepped on the starter. They got to Beech Grove before the rest of the club did.

Bill and his friend Beck drove home after the club meeting and repeated the performance in getting the car back in the garage. Then he went into the house. Presently the crowd came along and yelled at Bill through the window. Of course, that entailed explanations on Bill's part to his wife as to how he got home first. The other members of the club say Bill has not yet been able to explain to his wife how he beat them home.—Indianapolis News.
