All About Eggs.

In a hen's egg only one-fifth of the substance is nutritious. One-ninth is refuse, and the greater portion, about two-thirds, is water.

Judged by the amount of nutriment, a goose's egg is the most valuable; next in order are duck's, guinea fowl's, hen's, turkey's.

Eggs contain a large quantity of sulphur, which is purifying to the blood and good for the complexion.

To get the best egg you must feed your fowl on grain.

And to cook it in the most digestible way you must not boil the water. Heat the water to 180 degrees and leave the egg in it for ten minutes. You will then digest every morsel. But if you boil it for three minutes no less than one-twelfth of it will fall to be digested.—Short Stories.

A Solemn Thought.

"Just think of it, my friend," said the everlasting worrier. "In the arctic regions the nights are sometimes six months long."

"Well, what of it?" asked his friend as he adjusted his flu mask and a smile at the same time.

"Just imagine the consternation of a poor Eskimo wife when her husband calls up to tell her he will be away all night to sit up with a sick friend."

Gasoline to Be Mined.

The latest estimates of the United States geological survey show that if gasoline continues to be used up at the present rate, all the petroleum fields now in use will be exhausted before 1950. Where, then, will the future supply of gasoline come from? Billions of dollars are involved in the question. The probable answer is that "mined" gasoline will be used.

Colorado, Utah and other Western and middle Western states contain extensive oil-bearing deposits of bituminous shale. Crude oil can be extracted from them and this can be distilled further to obtain gasoline.

It is estimated that enough gasoline could be produced in this way to equal many times the amount obtained from all present-day fields.

Sunlight Not Good Germicide.

Sunlight as a germicide proves to be less efficient and reliable—at least in temperate regions—than has been commonly supposed. In his experiments in Algiers, M. de Laroquette has found that only prolonged or direct exposure to sunlight destroys bacteria, and that its action is chiefly confined to dry surfaces where the bacteria are fully desiccated. Bacteria in liquids are affected only by very intense light, and this only at slight depth. White light is more effective than colored, blue being slightly more powerful than other colors. Bacteria are chiefly killed by luminous rays, and ultra-violet rays have failed to show the bactericidal action so generally credited them, the ultra-red also being inefficient. At best, sunlight acts only at the surface, while layers of fat or muscle prevent even the slight ordinary penetration.
