Fighting For Its Life

The stranglehold of the car shortage is shutting off the wind of the lumber industry.

The freight car requirements of the country is estimated to be only 60 to 70 per cent of required number.

Suppose the government operation of banks gave the people only 60 to 75 per cent of money needed to transact business.

Would not everybody suffer? That is just what is happening in the lumber industry and the whole northwest is suffering.

No wonder Secretary Alien of the West Coast Lumbermen's association cautions the sawmills against piling up high cost stocks.

The railroad administration ordered daily delivery of 975 cars to western roads but averages less than 150 a day.

If all the cars were equitably distributed the northwest would be getting twice as many cars for lumber.

The railroads are using the cars to replenish their coal bins and ice houses.

Where Lies the Blame?

Relief from newsprint and job stock shortage—we were going to say extortion—is of far more importance to publishers and printers than any other political question.

It has also convinced the victims of the hold-up that congressional commissions and political palaver amount to nothing as against organized greed and profiteering.

It has also proven to the most skeptical that so-called free trade or duty free paper from Canada can be controlled by the middlemen.

A Portland card printing house states that the cost of 100 ordinary cards 2x3 1/2 inches has gone up fifty cents within 60 days and other stock in proportion.

If this is true the advance is outrageous and cannot be laid at the doors of the manufacturers, but is the work of paper jobbing trusts that control distribution.

There is no doubt that newspapers and job offices are being held up outrageously by some of the firms that control distribution of paper stock.

More paper mills, more production, relief from labor shortage, strikes and agitation against capital are policies to be advocated, but the middleman's robbery must be curbed.

The house journal of a big paper jobbing house says of the public: "They should accept the increased rates in a public-spirited way." Holy smoke, we should be thankful the little pack of calling cards are not advanced one dollar!

DAUGHTER OF AGUINALDO IN U. S. CAPITAL

She Meets Many Wives of American Statesmen and Makes a Hit.

When General Emilio Aguinaldo was leading the Filipino army against the American forces twenty years ago he probably little dreamed that some day a daughter of his would visit the city of Washington and would be given a great reception at the famous Congressional Club! And that the wives of 120 members of the American Congress and two wives of members of the President's cabinet would call upon her to pay their respects!

But all this actually happened when Miss Carmen Aguinaldo, his nineteen-year-old daughter, visited Washington recently. And those wives of the American statesmen expressed themselves as both charmed and surprised at the refined, tactful, college educated young miss who greeted them.

"Miss Aguinaldo was simply delightful," was the expression of one congressman's wife. "She was very modest, yet she acted so natural and thoroughly at home that she captivated everybody."

On another occasion while in Washington Miss Aguinaldo was given a real ovation by a Filipino-American audience when she recited "My Last Farewell," poem of Dr. Jose Rizal, the Filipino martyr.

Miss Aguinaldo is a student at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. While in Washington she was the guest of Mrs. Jaime C. deVeyra, wife of one of the resident commissioners from the Philippines. The Capitol building and the Congressional library appealed particularly to the young Filipina, while the beautiful sights from the Washington monument thrilled her with delight. When asked how she liked America, she smiled and answered:

"It is a wonderful country. I didn't like winter at first, but since I have learned how to skate I am having fine times. All the Americans whom I have met have been very good to me. My friends in Urbana and my classmates in the university are just lovely, but I cannot help feeling homesick at times because I am missing my father. My coming here was indeed a great sacrifice for him, for we are very close. He is so good to me."

Miss Aguinaldo is intensely patriotic. She does not conceal her resentment when she hears or reads of a misrepresentation of the Filipinos. "It is unfortunate," she once exclaimed in a voice full of sadness, "that my country and my people are hardly known, much less understood, by the people of America."

Politics is tabooed in any conversation with this Filipino maid. She evades the topic by replying that she is too young to express opinions on things political. "All I can say," she declares, "is that I share with my father in the desire for independence for my native land. There is no question about our being able to govern ourselves."

Filipinos declare Miss Aguinaldo has a "genuine Filipina temperament"—that is, she does not believe in the occidental custom of "dates" between young men and women. She does not see anything wrong in it, she says, but it is such a violent departure from the custom in the Philippines that she cannot adopt it.

"You might laugh at me," she said, "but I cannot go out with one single escort unchaperoned. I simply can't. I will go back to my country with the soul of a Filipino."

A newspaper in one of the large American cities that Miss Aguinaldo visited expressed the opinion that she would no doubt be greatly impressed by the sight of street cars and some of the fine residences she would see, but the truth is the young lady was raised in Manila, where she has seen an up-to-date street car system all her life.

When your dearest friend stops to look at baby, don't forget that her eyes also take in the carriage he is riding in.

But you don't have to worry about that now, because we have those famous
