There are six-count 'em-six young lawyers who desire to become district attorney of Marion county. Of the six, Walter E. Keyes seems to be the one destined to secure the prize. He is apparently the eldest of the bunch, is quite well known over who is willing to give everyone a square deal. He has served as deputy district attorney, and knows the needs of the office. He was several years city attorney of Salem. With a half-dozen candidates in the field it is not easy to prophesy the result, but if Walter E. Keyes is elected the district will get efficient and their parental homes over Sunconscientious service.

The Salem Journal is a good newspaper and growing better. One of the reasons it is placed in this class by its out-of the-city readers is that it carries a large amount of local news clipped eker were repairing their engine libet, an old negro whitewash artist, ar from the county papers.
