S-K Volcanoes ready to erupt

“The guys are hungry, and they’re ready to go after it.”

No, Volcanoes Manager Kyle Haines wasn’t talking about food Monday. The new manager of the Salem-Keizer Volcanoes was referring to the eagerness his players had to get this season started.

The opening-day roster is almost complete. Haines said a few more players were likely to be suited up for the opener, which began Thursday, at home against Vancouver, after press time.

A few names will be familiar. Pitchers Nick Gonzalez and Armando Paniagua, catcher Fernando Pujadas, shortstop Christian Lichtenthaler and outfielder Shilo McCall were Volcanoes last year.

Haines plans to start with a pitching rotation of Gonzalez, Logan Webb, Nathaniel Santiago, Luis Pino and Michael Connolly. Gonzalez is the only left-hander. Relief pitchers at this writing are Paniagua, Nolan Riggs, Eri Sim, Kirk Singer, Jarret Leverett and Rayan Hernandez, with Leverett the only lefty. It is not known yet who will be the closer.

Miguel Gomez, a switch-hitter, is the other catcher.

The infield will have John Riley at first base, Richard Amion at second base and Lichtenthaler at shortstop. Haines said he expected to start Chase Compton at third base and added that Mark Nelson, an outfielder, is also expected to get time at third. Compton and Nelson bat left-handed, and Lichtenthaler is a switch-hitter.

The other outfielders at this writing are McCall and Julio Pena.

Asked about the talents of his pitchers, Haines said all have shown good speed. Regarding the hitters, he said that all except the middle infielders have shown power and that several players, especially Amion, will show speed on the bases.

Lichtenthaler, who is from Albany, is the only Oregonian on the roster so far.
