Rules about recreational marijuana

By CRAIG MURPHY
Of the Keizertimes

After years of debate and months after approval by voters, recreational marijuana became legal in Oregon on Wednesday, July 1.

But there are some limits. The Oregon Liquor Control Commission (OLCC) financed the What's Legal? education campaign to provide information about what is and what isn't permissible under Measure 91, which was approved last November.

Some of the key basics: like alcohol, recreational marijuana is only legal for adults 21 years old or more. Recreational marijuana cannot be consumed publicly and cannot be sold or purchased. Up to four plants can be grown in a residence, regardless of how many people live at the residence.

"We know that Oregonians clearly want this information," said Steve Marks, executive director of the OLCC. "We also know that questions about what Oregonians can and cannot do are going to continue."

The What's Legal? website is at www.whatslegaloregon.com, while the OLCC has also established a FAQ page on the subject at <http://www.oregon.gov/olcc/marijuana/Pages/Frequently-Asked-Questions.aspx>.

Answers to some of the most frequent questions:

- You can use recreational marijuana at home or on private property. Public use is illegal. You can possess up to eight ounces of useable marijuana (dried marijuana flowers or leaves that are ready to smoke) in your home and up to one ounce outside the home.

Measure 91 defines a public place as "a place to which the general public has access and includes, but is not limited to, hallways, lobbies, and other parts of apartment houses and hotels not constituting rooms or apartments designed for actual residence, and highways, streets, schools, places of amusement, parks, playgrounds and premises used in connection with public passenger transportation."

A general rule of thumb: If someone outside of your home can see you, you're probably in public.

- Driving under the influence of marijuana remains illegal. Driving under the influence of intoxicants (DUII) refers to operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated or drugged, including impairment from the use of marijuana.

- You can grow up to four plants per residence, out of public view. Only four plants can be grown in a residence, regardless of how many adults live in the residence. For example, there can only be four plants in a residence of four adults, not 16 plants.

- You can share or give away recreational marijuana. However, you can't sell it or buy it until licensed retail shops open. OLCC will begin accepting license applications from those who want to operate retail marijuana outlets or commercially grow, process or wholesale marijuana on Jan. 4, 2016. It's estimated such shops won't be open before fall 2016.

- You can make edible products at home or receive them as gifts, but you can still only use them in private places. Growing, sharing and gifting are currently the only ways to legally acquire recreational marijuana.

- You can't take marijuana in or out of the state. That includes Washington state, which legalized recreational marijuana in 2013.

Marijuana can't be bought in Washington and brought across state lines, since taking marijuana across state lines is a federal offense.

- OLCC officials are still working on the availability of edibles and extracts, which will eventually be available at retail locations. Updates will be posted on the What's Legal website.

Trash rates, other council news

By CRAIG MURPHY
Of the Keizertimes

It's a trashy subject, but it has to be dealt with from time to time.

At their most recent meeting in June, Keizer City Councilors approved an option to add weekly organics service, following a public hearing in May.

For the first time since 2010, rates will be going up starting Aug. 1. A 20-gallon solid waste cart plus 95 gallon organic cart collected weekly and a 95-gallon recycling cart collected bi-weekly goes from $17.05 a month to $19.30 a month. A 35-gallon solid waste cart (others staying the same) rises from $18.95 to $21.45 a month, while a 64-gallon solid waste cart rises from $25.88 to $29.30 a month.

The matter was brought to council by Loren's Sanitation and Recycling and Valley Recycling and Disposal, Keizer's franchised solid waste and recycling haulers.

"Garbage haulers are an allowed monopoly, but you folks get to set the rates," city attorney Shannon Johnson told councilors.

Johnson noted he and city manager Chris Eppley "reviewed this matter carefully," in particular with regard to having reasonable and regular Consumer Price Index increases, rather than larger infrequent increases.

In addition, Johnson said local garbage and recycling collection companies have made about all the strides they can.

"They've reached their top level of efficiency," Johnson said. "It has taken a number of years, but they can't be any more efficient."

In other recent council business:

- Evaluations on Johnson and Eppley were recently completed by councilors, with both men having been determined to provide satisfactory service over the past year. Johnson reached the top step of his pay range last year and was thus only eligible for a Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) increase of 1.5 percent.

Eppley likewise reached the top step of his pay range last year, so he was also only eligible for the 1.5 percent COLA increase. However, Eppley signed a waiver to forego the increase.

- Two new resource officers were sworn in for the Keizer Police Department. Recruitment began in January and two reserve officers graduated from the Mid-Valley Reserve Training Academy on June 5. Greg Harrison and Daniel Rierson were sworn in.

- July was proclaimed as Parks and Recreation Month in Keizer. The proclamation was done at the national level by the U.S. House of Representatives as well.

In Keizer, more than 500 volunteers coming together to help build the Big Toy at Keizer Rapids Park and projects being funded through the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board's matching grant program were noted as achievements.

proclamation. Holland also runs the Keizer Rotary Amphitheater, which kicked off its annual free summer concert series last weekend with a performance by Kimberly Hall and Friends. The evening also included a thank you to Big Toy volunteers.

Concerts resume July 11 with Patrick Lamb, to be followed by Loafers (July 17), Johnny Limbo and the Lugnuts (July 18), Shakespeare in the Park: A Midsummer Night's Dream (July 23-25), Magical Mystery Four (Aug. 1), RIVERfair featuring Brady Goss (Aug. 8), The Brian Odell Band (Aug. 14), The North Santiam Band (Aug. 15), Pig-in-the-Park Hawaiian Luau

(Aug. 22), Oregon Valley Boys (Aug. 29) and Briana Renea (Sept. 12).
