

Wet, wild weather in Keizer

Submitted Above: Danny Wold took this picture of Springtime Court the afternoon of Dec. 7.

Left: Rain and wind helped bring down this tree at Horizon Ridge Drive and Jakewood Drive NE on Dec. 2. KEIZERTIMES/Andrew Jackson KEIZERTIMES/Lyndon A. Zaitz Sylvia Carlstrom found her neighbor's tree on her house on Wednesday, Dec. 9 on Kinglet Way.

KEIZERTIMES/Craig Murphy Heavy rain led to this flooding in the Hidden Creek Drive area on Monday.

KEIZERTIMES/Craig Murphy Humans may not care for extreme rain, but these geese at Claggett Creek Park on Dec. 4 didn't mind.

the glowing theme, Mitchell is encouraging parade goers to dress in glow-in-the-dark attire. In case you need any, a vendor will be on hand selling such items.

There were some complaints after last year's parade from those at the end of the route, saying the parade ended early. Mitchell said that wasn't the case, but steps have been taken anyway to clarify the issue. New signs are up this year and were expected to be in place by Dec. 10.

Parade organizers estimate that around 80,000 people fill River Road each year to catch a glimpse of the parade.

River Road is expected to start reopening for traffic around 9 p.m. as the parade continues southbound through the city.

Police are asking for sidewalks along River Road to be kept clear of chairs until the parade starts so that disabled citizens can travel on the sidewalks.

six years. The Walkers recently announced they have started a new West Coast League team, the Gresham Grey Wolves. Neither of the Walkers attended Monday's meeting, since Jerry was out of town at baseball meetings and Lisa was home sick. Lisa did send a short message to councilors prior to the meeting.

"We pray for a positive outcome," she wrote. "Thank you for all you do."
