Grants to the Salem-Keizer School District totaling $567,788 were approved by the School Board on Tuesday.

The largest, $475,518 from the Oregon Department of Education, involves McNary and West Salem high schools. The programs are in culinary arts at McNary and fire science at West Salem. In the McNary program, students acquire advanced culinary skills working in a commercial kitchen.

Five other grants from ODE are $30,565 for identification and comprehensive educational programs for migrant children, $24,643 in annual System Performance Review and Funding for performance data collection and reporting for special education, $19,800 to support training toward statewide assessments of students with disabilities, $12,596 in reimbursements of costs of Oregon-grown and -processed food, and $3,000 for physical fitness for elementary students.

The board learned that Salem-Keizer Head Start had earned the highest rating (five stars) from the state's Quality Rating Improvement System, which involves an in-depth review by ODE.

In other business, the board renewed the charters for Optimum Learning Environmental School and Valley Inquiry School.

Fewer personnel actions than usual were approved, with none focused on the McNary attendance area.

In the Spotlight on Success portion of the meeting, Ron Richards, McNary athletic director, was announced to have won the Distinguished Service Award from the National Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association. The award was presented to Richards at the National Athletic Directors Conference in Orlando, Fla., in December.

"The bottom line is that Ron cares about kids," John Honey, former McNary principal, said in nominating him. "He wants them to have a wide range of opportunities to connect with the school, their peers, coaches and the community. He helps them develop chances to find improvement, success, personal satisfaction and pride through their effort."

Two people spoke from the audience. Ross Swartzendruber of Salem, a parent, said he was opting out of achievement testing, as were hundreds of thousands of other parents around the United States, because they wanted more local control of education. Joseph Nelson of Salem, also a parent, said more nutritional information on school meals was needed.

Perry gets high marks from Board

Superintendent Christy Perry of the Salem-Keizer School District received high marks from the School Board in a work session that followed the board's regular meeting Tuesday.

The annual evaluation for Perry, who recently completed her first academic year in her current position, was for the 2014-15 school year. The board based its evaluation on student performance against state averages, graduation rates, dropout rates, English language learner performance, and growth in the percentage of schools that show above-average growth compared to similar schools in Oregon.

The board's report noted that Perry had worked for staff compliance with district policies and reported small areas of non-compliance to the board regularly. It said she had developed "excellent relationships" with the board and community partners including the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce and Chemeketa Community College.

Although the board stated that academic scores were not "where we would like them to be," its report said there are many factors in the scores for which she should not be blamed. It said Perry "has done an admirable job of moving and maintaining our academic scores."

The board will hold one more work session this month, at 6 p.m. Jan. 26 at the Support Services Center in Salem.

Library to honor supporters

The Keizer Community Library is seeking nominations for the annual Art Burr Library Champion Award to recognize individuals, businesses or organizations that make significant contributions to the well-being of the library.

Awards will be presented to an individual, business or community organization for substantial involvement in or commitment to the library, or contribution of time, talent or resources that resulted in the enhancement or recognition of Keizer Community Library services.

Any Keizer resident may submit an award nomination by Sunday, Jan. 31.

Nomination forms are available at the Keizer Community Library, 980 Chemawa Road NE, on the ground floor of the Keizer Heritage Center, or by e-mail to Gayle McMurria-Bachik, Bachik@comcast.net.

Ask Mr. Trash

Q: What types of glass can be recycled?

A: Food grade bottles and jars only!

Other types of glass contaminate the recycling process and ruin newly made containers. That means, NO cups, dishes, candleholders, ovenware, window or mirror glass, or light bulbs. Thanks for your careful attention!
