

CCWC has discovery night, photo contest

It's time to discover your watershed.

The Claggett Creek Watershed Council (CCWC) meets monthly at Keizer Civic Center and is led by Mark Caillier.

Through April 13, the CCWC is holding a photo contest. Awards for the contest will be presented during the free Watershed Discovery Night on Wednesday, April 27. The event starts at 6 p.m. at the civic center.

The Claggett Creek Watershed includes most of Keizer, portions of Northeast Salem and unincorporated Marion County on either side of Interstate 5. The watershed collects all the rainwater that could drain into Claggett Creek, which feeds the Willamette River.

The CCWC does projects and educational activities with the idea of protecting and promoting water quality and wildlife habitat in the watershed.

For the contest, the photo must be taken within the watershed boundary. Photos can be submitted to contest@ccwc-council.org or via Facebook at the CCWC page. Photos need to be less than 10 MB in size, in JPEG format and include the photographer's name and age, as well as the photo category and where the photo was taken.

The categories are urban, nature and wildlife. Members of the Keizer Art Association will do the judging, with Keizer mayor Cathy Clark helping as well. There will be three age groups within each category: 11 and under, 12 to 18 and 18-plus. The nine winners will each receive a $50 cash card, while one overall grand prize winner will get a cash card worth $100.

On April 27, the event starts with booths, displays, activities and demonstrations.

Awards will be handed out at 6:45 p.m. At 7:05 p.m. the documentary Upriver will be shown, which is about the Willamette River and Oregonians who take part in its future.

Event contributors include the cities of Keizer and Salem as well as Marion County.

For more information on the CCWC, visit www.claggettcwc.org or find them on Facebook.

Buildings are taking shape nicely at the Keizer Station Area C construction project along Chemawa Road. Infrastructure such as the extension of McLeod Lane was done previously, but in the last couple of months buildings have become visible. Mountain West Investment Corporation is building 180 apartments while Bonaventure Senior Living is constructing a 154-unit senior living facility. The first units are expected to be ready sometime this summer.
