Young entrepreneurs show off their wares at the Lemonade Day kickoff in early March.

Kids: Register your Lemonade Day stands

Ten booths manned by local children were part of the launch for Lemonade Day 2016 held at the Salem Convention Center on March 10. The operators of the booths were conducting market research for just the right recipe that would sell on the yellow day on Sunday, May 1 throughout Keizer and Salem.

Lemonade Day, a national organization, teaches grade- and middle-school students how to be an entrepreneur by planning and managing a lemonade stand alone or with their friends. The first Lemonade Day was held here in 2014.

The launch party was an opportunity for a few Lemonaders to see which of their recipes would be a hit with the public. About 200 people tasted and voted for the best recipe.

This year's Lemonade Day is being organized by the Salem-Keizer Education Foundation. There are expected to be hundreds of stands on that day throughout the two cities. Some of the kids are planning to set up their booths at high traffic retail locations, others in their neighborhood.

Participants agree to share a third of their revenues with a charity of their choice, save a third for their education and spend a third as mad money.

Registration is now open. Visit salemkeizer.lemonadeday.org for information.
