Food 4 Thought

"I think we too often make choices based on the safety of cynicism, and what we're lead to is a life not fully lived. Cynicism is fear, and it's worse than fear - it's active disengagement."

— Ken Burns, documentary filmmaker, born July 29, 1953

Familiar faces apply for council vacancy

Two Keizer residents have applied to fill a vacancy on the city council.

Former city councilor Mark Caillier and one-time city council candidate Eamon Bishop will present their cases to the sitting members of the council at 6 p.m. Aug. 1. The preferred candidate will be appointed at the city council meeting at 7 p.m. that same evening. Dennis Koho resigned from the council July 1 and set into motion the replacement process. Bishop or Caillier will serve out the remainder of his term and will need to run for re-election in November if they want to continue in the role.

Keizertimes sent both men the same three questions regarding their interest in seat. Here are their replies:

Keizertimes: What unique qualities/experience can you bring to bear as a city councilor?

Eamon Bishop: The pinnacle of my career was serving as a police commander, a position earned via my leadership abilities. Being a leader requires humility, the need to be a skilled educator, innate common sense and the courage to innovate. Leadership is not defined as being an "expert." As a commander, I found that a good leader requires only a basic (yet solid) knowledge of the involved skill set, coupled with information on where to find resources with detailed information if needed. In the same way, an elected leader is surrounded by staff members able to provide any specific information.

Over the years I learned that communication is far more effective if properly condensed and simplified. An elected official with this understanding can provide information on the workings of government sans minutiae, allowing citizens to seize the basics with confidence. It is that confidence which brings citizens to realize that they possess what is needed to become a city leader themselves.

Mark Caillier: Over twenty years of volunteer membership on nearly every City of Keizer committee, task force and project at one time or another and four years' previous experience as an active Keizer city councilor would support some level of knowledge and experience. However, in the nearly four years since I left the Keizer City Council I have learned in total, more about our community than any other time. My community volunteer experiences have taken a much broader scope and have involved literally hundreds of new friends and community partners. These new relationships have kept me informed, relevant and has increased my appreciation of diversity and associated solutions.

KT: Is there a major issue, either current or on the drawing board, you would like to have a voice in?

EB: As a citizen I have done what I believe I was able to do in order to provide facts and information to the city and to the owners of the Herber property that might perhaps result in retention of that special piece of Keizer. Yesterday is just that, and one cannot go back and change anything that has already taken place. I am a person who is able to let go of ill feelings based on history in which I had no part. I will use my voice and direct my efforts toward proactive methods of determining public desires, especially as relates to growth issues, traffic problems and the realistic future of the downtown business district.

MC: Even though this appointment is temporary (five months), I have every intention to have a voice in all issues that come before the city council. Be it land use planning, financing services or come what may, I plan to give the citizens of Keizer my best in affecting and making policy to direct our city and the city manager.

KT: The city's motto, "Pride, Spirit, Volunteerism," can be interpreted in different, equally valid, ways. How have those words impacted your life and work?

EB: As to volunteerism, families and individuals are busier today and have far more

Keizertimes 'sweeps' journalism awards

The staff of the Keizertimes was honored with 18 awards at the annual Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association's Better Newspaper Contest annual convention Thursday, July 21.

Topping the list was a Sweepstakes Award presented for "receiving the highest overall rating for a weekly newspaper." In other words, Keizertimes accumulated more points for awards than any other paper of its circulation size in Oregon.

First place awards included: best enterprise reporting and best lifestyle coverage for editors Craig Murphy and Eric A. Howald for the Chasing Dark series, which looked at issues surrounding opioid addiction in Keizer; best photo essay (Murphy, Howald, Andrew Jackson and Dee Moore) for the Iris Festival Review in Pictures; best writing, best headline writing and best feature photo awards for Howald.

Second place awards went to: Jackson, Keizertimes' production manager, for best graphics; Murphy and Jackson for best page one design; Publisher Lyndon Zaitz for best editorial; Murphy for best coverage of business and economic development issues, best enterprise reporting and best feature story; and Howald for

Third place awards were presented to: Howald for best educational coverage, best sports story and best multimedia element; and Murphy for best headline writing.

"Community journalism is very much alive," said Zaitz. "The excellent team at the Keizertimes proves that week in and week out as they cover and report what's happening in the seven square miles that is Keizer. I couldn't be prouder of our team; all the awards were very well deserved."

National Night Out Aug. 2

The 33rd annual National Night Out is slated Tuesday, Aug. 2, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Registration for National Night Out 2016 is available on the KPD website at www.

5 YEARS AGO

Six years behind bars for Iris Parade stabbing suspect

Mario A. Gutierrez, 21, pleaded guilty to assault and unlawful weapon charges stemming from a fight, which spilled over into the parade route along River Road. He won't be eligible for early release because assault II is a measure 11 crime.

10 YEARS AGO

Cops nab 2 for office burglaries

Keizer police arrested Steven J. Geiseker, 32, and Jesse R. Davis, 25, in connection with a $25,000 weekend burglary of a River Road business. Items absconded were desktop and laptop computers, computer software, LCD projectors, computer monitors, modems, printers and cash.

15 YEARS AGO

Suspect fights off store employees

A man suspected of shoplifting fought off Safeway employees in the early morning hours and then led them on a chase through the store before escaping with nine cartons of cigarettes, valued at $270. Keizer police caught up with the man, Shawn M. Moody, 19, and took him into custody.

20 YEARS AGO

Service held for Keizertimes proofreader F. Hague Callister, a retired executive who volunteered for nearly eight years as a proofreader for the Keizertimes, died Wednesday, July 17, at home. He was 82. Mr. Callister was the father of former publisher, Scotta Callister.

entertainment available to them at home thanks to the internet and gaming. This spawns a sense of content, meaning that there is less interest in providing effort to improve our city.

As regards spirit, the increase of membership in neighborhood associations is a positive sign, as are internet sites which increase inter-neighborhood communication.

To pride, I have to say that a good deal of the sentiment is the responsibility of the city of Keizer itself. Are we proud of the condition of the southern end of Keizer? Is the spending of city dollars disparate when it comes to geographic location? From the outside looking in, this appears to be the case. If this is not the case, then what can we do as a City government and as citizens of Keizer as a whole to make our entire town have an appealing atmosphere? I believe that there are far more ways to improve southern Keizer that are simply being ignored.

MC: As children we grew up being a part of community volunteerism where the spirit of doing things together and for others created positive outcomes like activities and facilities for children and families. We did not expect "someone else" to do it for us. We participated together for a variety of reasons but we all were pulling in the same direction (perhaps in different ways on occasion) with the greater good for the community the priority. That is what drew Kris and I to Keizer in 1975, brought us back in 1990 and attracted my sister to move here in 2015. The City of Keizer and the many organizations and groups within our community provide us an opportunity to participate at almost any level. The health of where we live is directly related to the level of community participation demonstrated by each of us. I choose to participate to support my community and continue my personal growth and learning.
