Mendez retired the next three batters.

In the Spokane seventh, Kowalczyk hit a two-out double to right center. McDonald reached first on an error by Rivera, with Kowalczyk scoring. Perez then hit a home run over the left field fence, his first, and Spokane had an 8-1 lead.

Alex Daniele took the mound for the Indians in the seventh, and Ryan Kirby led off with a single to center.

Howard singled to center, and a walk to Geraldo loaded the bases. A pitch hit Reynolds, forcing Kirby home.

John Timmins pitched the eighth for the Volcanoes and set the Spokane batters down in order, becoming Salem-Keizer's most effective pitcher of the game.

Gio Brusa raised Volcano hopes in the eighth by leading off with a triple to center, but the new Spokane pitcher, Kaleb Fontenot, retired the next three men.

Matt Pope took the mound for the Volcanoes in the ninth and got clobbered for six hits and five runs, four earned.

Lohr singled to center, and Kowalczyk and McDonald singled to right, jamming the bases again. Blaine Prescott, who had come in as a defensive replacement in center field, drove in the three with a triple to center. LeBlanc brought Prescott home with a single to left.

Howard walked to lead off the Volcano ninth. Rivera hit a home run, his first, over the right field fence.

Fontenot retired the next two batters, and Heath Quinn tripled to right. Right fielder Spivey crashed into the fence pursuing the ball but stayed in the game. Quinn scored on a passed ball with Brusa at bat, but Brusa struck out to end the game.

Hernandez was the losing pitcher with an 0-3 record.

"We couldn't get the big hits," Volcano manager Kyle Haines said. "The pitching and the defense let us down."

Reynolds, who said he hit his homer off a fast ball, commented, "We need to have good defense and get timely hits."

Asked what he thought the pitchers should work on, Timmins said, "Just confidence, really, thinking that your pitches are better than what the batters will do."
