said Sgt. 1st Class Zach Pickett, the non-commissioned officer-in-charge of the support office. "Anything to do with helping a family, we will do it. Even if we don't have something right then for a specific need, we go out and find the resources."

It turned out that Owens Corning Roofing had recently started up the Roof Deployment Project aimed at providing military families with new roofs. The goal is to decrease stress on military families by taking care of one of the largest home-owning expenses.

Owens Corning supplies the materials and enlists a local contractor to supply the labor, which is how Trevor Pfeifer, second-generation owner of Pfeifer Roofing, entered the picture.

"We were totally on board," said Pfeifer. "Will do it again next year? Absolutely. It's a way to give back to our community and our troops and that's something Pfeifer Roofing believes in."

Pfeifer Roofing is a platinum contractor with Owens Corning and maintains its rating through meeting criteria regarding quality, training and insurance. Pfeifer said the total cost of the project labor could have been as much as $5,000 to $6,500.

Stancliff and Pfeifer met for the first time back in April, and Stancliff said she felt well taken care of. "Trevor always made sure I knew what was going on and that I wasn't being forgotten. It's been a great experience overall," Stancliff said.

Stancliff isn't the only one benefitting from the new roof. She lives in the home with her 14-year-old daughter Nicolette Parra, a freshman at McNary.

"It was hard when I was younger and she would go away a lot, and when she deployed I was only five or six. I've gotten used to it a lot more and she makes me really, really proud. She's a single mom and she has a good job and her own house. It's cool that her service gets rewarded," Nicolette said.

Since starting the process, Nicolette has joined the teen panel of the Oregon Service Member & Family Support Office where she plans events for other youth from military families.

"We had a back-to-school bash and we had 300 kids that got free school supplies and a free backpack," Nicolette said.
