

Yaquina Bay Bonanza

John's excitement is infectious as he eases the boat away from the dock at Newport's Yaquina Bay.

"This is going to be a day of quality and quantity," he whispers above the purr of the 15-horse outboard.

We are equipped with gear needed to spend a day harvesting the bounty of the estuary.

It is one of those treasured days to be on the Oregon coast in February, a crisp 50 degrees, puffy white clouds against a backdrop of blue. Most important, no winds.

There is something about the assortment of odors and sounds of a bay/harbor that arouse something special in a man's soul.

John's master plan: First, we dump in our three crab pots. "We will let the pots 'soak' while we do the rest of our things," he explains. John loves seafood. When he goes after a species, he becomes a real predator.

It's low tide, so we will run up the bay a short distance to a sandy beach and rake cockle clams.

"Cockles are about the size of a baseball and are only an inch or so below the surface of the sand," John explains. "You can usually see the little mounds," he adds. "Just rake 'em up."

We are the only ones on the beach. We have our limits of nice cockles in 30 minutes.

Next is pump sand shrimp for bait. I have never pumped sand shrimp before, I have always bought them for steel-head bait.

There are hundreds of tiny shrimp holes in the sand. John's pump is a simple plunger type made out of PVC pipe. He pumps and I grab the tricky little critters.

After pumping about a gallon or so of shrimp, we head back down the bay toward the bridge to fish for pile perch.

To my surprise, there sits The Olympic, the drag boat my son works on, moored at the dock. As our luck would have it, son Gary is out working on the deck.

We pull along side and hail him. He is as surprised as we are to see each other.

"What are you guys up to?" he asks. "Headed down under the bridge to catch some pile perch," I yell back.

"Wait a minute," he answers, as he disappears below deck.

In a couple of minutes he reappears with two nice lingcod of 7-8 pounds.

To our surprise he drops them into our boat. "There, you have a good start." He adds with a chuckle, "Don't worry, we've got close to 4,000 pounds in here. Just came in from a great trip."

Fishing for pile perch under the bridge is a blast. The bottom has to be a jungle of various objects that are non-forgiving on fishing gear.

John comes prepared with a container of used spark plugs for sinkers.

He patiently shows me how to rig up. "Spark plug as a dropper, two hooks up the line, a piece of shrimp on each hook, and let it straight down. Get snagged up, break it off, start over." Several times we have a perch on each hook. Some of them are 3-4 pounds.

For the next hour or so we have a blast--hooking fish, losing fish. Several times we hook something big that just heads for the ocean and we have to break them off or lose all our line. Was it a big ling or maybe a cabazon?

We do a pretty good job of decorating the area with spark plugs and broken hooks.

We get our limits of perch and we are ready to pull crab traps.

Crabbing isn't too good but we wind up with 13-14 keepers.

Then comes the experience of the day. We are headed for the dock when two state troopers pull along side to check us.

After the usual pleasantries, and observing our assortment of gear, "See the rakes, been after cockles?" We hold up our buckets for examination.

"Crabbing too?" We hand over the container of crabs.

"And fishing?" John lifts the heavy gunny sack of fish, including the lings. Both officers take a wide-eyed second look.

"Where did you get those?"

"Right down there, under the bridge." John responds with his best poker face.

One officer looks at the other. "Holy smoke, I'm not going with you anymore. I'm going with these guys."

Februarys have come and gone since that memorable day. Those officers have probably retired by now. But, all those crabs are still there in the Yaquina, waiting to be caught.

McNary bowlers going to state

By DEREK WILEY
Of the Keizertimes

What started with just three bowlers, junior Aneeka Stephen and two sophomores, Mimi Garza and Cassidy Steckman, blossomed into a district championship for McNary High School.

With the addition of sisters Cecilia and Natalia Valle midway through the season, the Lady Celts defeated McKay on Sunday, Jan. 22 at AMF Firebird Lanes in Salem to win the district crown.

"They didn't have a lot of experience and won district," said Dan Kaplan, who coaches the McNary boys. "That shows (girls coach) Kathy (Kaplan) is an amazing coach."

With the victory, the McNary girls qualified to compete against 15 other teams in the state high school tournament on Saturday, Feb. 25 and Sunday, Feb. 26 at KingPin's in Portland.

McNary's boys team also qualified for the state competition by finishing third in the district behind McKay and Silverton.

The Celtics team includes Nick Blythe, Tim Kiser, Derrick Lucas, Adam Teal, Layton Thurlow, Konnor Sjullie, Garrett Hughes and Chandler Gregory.

The boys will also compete against 15 other teams at KingPin's in Portland.

McNary's girls and boys bowling teams both qualified for the state tournament Feb. 25-26 in Portland. Thrivent Financial donated $1,000 to help pay for registration and travel.
