Fees, fueling center hearings at council July 17

From previous reporting

The Keizer City Council will have its hands full with four public hearings at its meeting Monday, July 17. Two of them could impact every resident in the city.

Topping the list are hearings on ordinances to establish public safety and parks services fees.

The council will take testimony on a proposed $4 fee to create a dedicated parks fund and an additional $4 fee to create a dedicated police fund.

In May, city councilors directed staff to draft an ordinance to include at least the following: a $4 fee per month assessed to both residential and commercial customers with no increases for one year; an $8 cap on future increases; a reporting requirement for the Keizer parks and public works staff; and available discounts for seniors and low-income residents along with the stipulation that no one will have their water cut off due to not paying the fee.

The idea met with some consternation on the part of council. Some councilors would rather see the city put the fee on a ballot or police services placed ahead of parks needs, others felt the need was imperative and action needed to be taken.

Councilors Kim Freeman, Roland Herrera and Bruce Anderson voted for drafting the ordinance, but wavered on support of the path the council was taking.

"I will support moving forward to draft an (ordinance), but that doesn't mean I am supportive of the (ordinance)," Anderson said.

Mayor Cathy Clark was the most vocal supporter, while Laura Reid hadn't appeared to have made a decision. Councilor Marlene Parsons was absent at the May meeting.

The fee would result in about $600,000 in additional funding for parks.

In June, councilors directed city staff to draft the ordinance regarding a public safety fee. During the meeting, Keizer cops got glowing reviews from both residents and councilors and many of the same issues that appeared to cause anxiety regarding the parks were not even broached.

The $4 fee would be charged to each commercial and residential utility customers in Keizer. If the fee proceeds at that amount, the city would collect about $630,000. The fee would pay for the addition of five new officers: two officers would be added to the night patrol shifts, and one officer each would be added to the Community Response Unit, the detective unit and the traffic unit.

The council will also hold a public hearing on development code changes that would allow a fueling center to be constructed in the Safeway parking lot at the corner of Chemawa Road and River Road.

Safeway approached the city earlier this year with a request to amend city code to allow for a fueling center. The Keizer Planning Commission approved a change in the code, but did not include a site for associated convenience sales that Safeway reps advocated said was "necessary part" of the fueling center.

Keizer Fire District is opposing the change citing the increase in traffic to the shopping center directly across from the fire station.

Lastly, the council will take testimony on a proposed amendment to the Keizer Station Area B Master Plan. Approval would change the size of the allowable buildings from two roughly equally-sized buildings to one larger building and one smaller building. The change is being requested to foster the development of a movie theater in the area across from the Salem-Keizer Transit Center on Keizer Station Boulevard Northeast.

Anyone wishing to comment may do so in person at the meeting or submit written response to City Recorder Tracy Davis no later than 5 p.m. July 17. Responses can be delivered to the Keizer Civic Center or mailed to Tracy Davis, City Recorder, P.O. Box 21000, Keizer, OR 97307.

River Road pursuit ends with crash

An early morning pursuit ended in a crash that downed a city light pole. Keizer police pursued the vehicle at a high rate of speed when it approached the intersection at River Road North and Lockhaven Drive Northeast. The driver lost control, struck a city light pole, bounced off, careening 75 feet off the roadway. The light pole blocked southbound traffic on River Road.

If approved, a rule in the new Keizer Development Plan would make it illegal for most residents to park RVs in their driveways. And area storage facilities are running out of room and have trouble with break-ins.

Once-in-a-lifetime event or Apoc-eclipse?

By ERIC A. HOWALD
Of the Keizertimes

About this time one year ago, everyone was told to get excited about the total solar eclipse that will pass over Keizer on Aug. 21 and travel a path across the lower United States.

As the celestial event looms, messages from public officials have started sounding like residents should be preparing for a doomsday event with encouragements to stock up on gas and basic supplies.

The reality? It's probably somewhere in between.

"There's nothing really definitive because we don't have locked down numbers yet," said Lt. Andrew Copeland of the Keizer Police Department.

Regional public safety officials are expected to meet in a closed-door session on July 18, but estimates regarding the number of visitors the Salem-Keizer area can expect to see have ranged from 100,000 to a half million. Copeland said it's likely to be on the lower end of that spectrum, but nothing is set.

State officials expect about 1 million people to travel to Oregon to take part in the planned and spontaneous activities, but many will likely peel away from Interstate 5 to areas where ambient lights are less likely to interfere with the viewing.

Still, Copeland said Keizer police are doing all they can to prepare.

"We will try to have reserves and cadets at Keizer Rapids Park during the concerts planned for that event and we will have two overtime officers on duty throughout the weekend," Copeland said.

On the day of the eclipse, Copeland said the department will have every officer they can in uniform and on the streets to deal with expected traffic.

"It might come down to manning intersections to try to get people to I-5, but we're not sure how backed up the highway will be either," Copeland said.

The largest potential concern from Copeland's perspective is that each local agency is going to need to be self-reliant in the run-up to and aftermath of the eclipse. Assisting other agencies might be a logistic impossibility.

"I don't anticipate any problems because we don't expect disruptive behavior," Copeland said. "Otherwise, fill up about a week before the eclipse, get together with your family and call it history."

Oregon Department of Transportation officials said to expect crowding on highways throughout the state. Drivers should plan to arrive early and stay late to help ease the traffic burden and the stress of travel.

Drivers should also be aware that normal travel paths may change, ODOT construction zones and non-emergency maintenance will halt between Aug. 18 and 22; truck scales will be closed and hundreds of extra roadside readerboards are expected to be deployed on the state's highways.

While many businesses are planning their own activities, other interruptions can be expected. Deliveries may be delayed due to traffic and power and utility complications may arise.

Businesses and residents have been encouraged to stock up on necessities like medications, water, toiletries and a food in case visitors deplete local stocks.

Oregon's SAIF Corporation, which supplies workers' compensation insurance and other services, is encouraging business owners talk with employees about what plans are for the day of the eclipse and encourage telecommuting. SAIF officials also suggest purchasing eclipse glasses for employees and customers for safe viewing during the eclipse.

Today in History

Parisian revolutionaries and mutinous troops storm and dismantle the Bastille, a royal fortress and prison that had come to symbolize the tyranny of the Bourbon monarchs. This dramatic action signaled the beginning of the French Revolution, a decade of political turmoil and terror in which King Louis XVI was overthrown and tens of thousands of people, including the king and his wife Marie-Antoinette, were executed.
