

ECLIPSE: 'It really starts to feel spooky'

was something altogether unexpected.

"As totality started to arrive, my psyche and physiology was saying it wasn't right - it's slowly creeping up on you and in the last five minutes or so it really starts to feel spooky," Davidson said.

A total solar eclipse is defined by four phases called "contacts." While the second contact - in which the sun is directly behind the moon - is always the headliner, there is plenty to see in the hours and moments leading up to that brief period.

In 1979, Davidson's viewing spot was atop a hill and he could see the shadow approaching. He was actually still watching the shadow approach when someone in another group called out that the diamond ring effect was happening overhead. That's when he began snapping photos.

The diamond ring effect can be seen about 15 seconds before and after totality when the solar corona becomes visible and the gives off the appearance of a sparkling diamond along an edge.

While Davidson didn't spot any in 1979, he was also looking for Bailey's beads, which appear around the edges of the eclipse about five seconds before and after totality. The effect is created by the mountains and valleys on the moon's surface. They are named after English astronomer Francis Baily who provided the first exact explanation of the effect in 1836.

Once totality arrived, Davidson could also see the band of shadow in the sky.

"It wasn't as dark as I thought it would be. I could see stars, but there was a big dark band in the sky and on either side the sky was basically normal," he said.

If you are dead set on trying to capture the eclipse, Photos by Orion is offering a class Aug. 17 at Bush's Pasture Park in Salem. Cost is $50 and pre-registration is required. Call 503-385-1435 to sign up.

from the Keizer Fire District who arrived on scene within minutes of receiving the call. The injuries were not life-threatening.

It was the second time in eight hours that police had responded to calls for service at the house. The first call came in about 10 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 3.

"We received a call from a subject that said he was inside the house and wanting police assistance. He wanted us to take him to the hospital," said Deputy Chief Jeffrey Kuhns.

At that time, officers responded and talked with the Haskins' parents as well as Joel, but they could not find the caller - believed to have been Isaac. Kuhns added that the police were familiar with Isaac from prior calls for service.

Officers responding to the assault call found Isaac in the backyard of the home, but he refused to surrender and scaled a ladder leading to a second-floor room of the home. The officers encountered Isaac again after entering the front door of the home and he was struck in the leg with a baton as officers tried to make an arrest. Isaac then barricaded himself in a bathroom and refused to come out, Kuhns said.

Keizer officers requested the assistance of the Salem Police Tactical Negotiations Team while they prepared a search warrant to enter the home.

"We were working on a search warrant and Salem SWAT was on standby while the negotiators talked with the younger brother," Kuhns said.

The negotiating team engaged Isaac in conversation and he surrendered without incident about 8:40 a.m. He was taken to Marion County Correctional Facility where he was charged with assault, harassment and interference with making a police report.

He was being held on $47,000 bail.
