

Violinist to provide soothing notes before and during eclipse

Renowned violinist David Klinkenberg will perform a free concert at Keizer Rotary Amphitheatre to celebrate the total solar eclipse Monday, Aug. 21.

Klinkenberg will play from 9 to 10:30 a.m. during the celestial event.

He will also perform a ticketed show at the Keizer Rotary Amphitheatre at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 20. Tickets are $15 and are available at Uptown Music, 3827 River Road N., and at the amphitheatre.

A graduate of Oregon State University, Klinkenberg has deep family roots in Oregon. His initial fooling around with the fiddle soon became serious violin lessons; he studied with Susan Dvorak, the granddaughter of composer Antonin Dvorak.

After Klinkenberg was signed to his first record deal, he left college and headed to Nashville. He made a record and toured with bands such as Six Pence None the Richer. After touring the country he returned to complete his political science degree at OSU.

After receiving his degree, he worked on his second album and staged a successful concert at Portland's Memorial Coliseum, which helped him to team up with Jim Brickman, the best selling pianist. He has since played with other artists such as Kristen Chenoweth, Jon Secade, Orla Fallon of Celtic Woman and others.

Klinkenberg will bring the same high-energy show to Keizer Rapids Park that he has performed at Lincoln Center in New York.

Concerts, postmark will mark eclipse passage in Salem

If you are willing to brave traffic next weekend – and are looking for some eclipse-related fun – here are some of events the Oregon State Capitol Foundation (OCSF) is hosting around the area in the run-up to and during the eclipse.

Saturday, Aug. 19

• The Salem Philharmonic Orchestra is performing a one-hour Out-of-This-World Eclipse Concert in State Capitol State Park beginning at 11:30 a.m. The orchestra will be playing selections from Star Wars, Star Trek, The Planets and more being led by conductor Sean Paul Mills.

Sunday, Aug. 20

• OMSI educator Jim Todd will be giving a lecture at 11:30 a.m. in the Capitol. Find out how to get the most out of viewing the eclipse and what stages you are looking for. The lecture will also be streamed live online at oregonlegislature.gov. Starting at 11:00 a.m., the OCSF will be handing out free eclipse glasses while supplies last.

Monday, Aug. 21

• Starting at approximately 9:05 a.m., Rose City Astronomer President Margaret McCrea will be narrating the eclipse (with sound amplification) from the Capitol front steps. The OSCF will be handing out free eclipse glasses before 9 a.m. while supplies last.

• The United States Postal Service will be issuing a special “Arc of Totality” postmark from the Oregon State Capitol between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. The thermal “Total Eclipse of the Sun” stamp will be sold on site, in sheets of 16, as well as a commemorative envelope from the Oregon State Capitol, the first of five state capitals in totality for this eclipse.

School supplies needed

Salem-Keizer Education Foundation school supply drive runs from Aug. 1 to 31.

The drive helps sustain SKEF's school supply depot, which is a year-round, cost-free supply resource to schools across the Salem-Keizer School District.

Local residents can help kids go to school equipped with the proper supplies by donating.

Collection barrels are located throughout Salem and Keizer, including at the Keizer-ertimes.

For more information and a complete list of drop sites, go to skeducationfoundation.org/resources/display/school_supply_drive.

Cornhole Classic Sept. 9

Shangri-La and Salem Ale Works present the second annual Capitol City Cornhole Classic on Sept. 9 at the State Capitol State Park, 155 Waverly Street NE. The event starts at 10 a.m. and goes to 5 p.m.

Capitol City Cornhole Classic is a fundraiser for Shangri-La. Proceeds will help people with disabilities and families with disadvantages realize and achieve their full potential.

Pre-registration is required by Sept. 5 at 10 p.m. Entry fees are non-refundable and non-transferable. Admission is $45 per team for two player teams. One player rule breaker division for children ages six to 12 and people with disabilities who need accommodation is $10.

For more information, go to ShangriLaOregon.org or contact Ashley at community@shangri-la-or.org.

Robert D. Hoover

August 17, 1938 – July 25, 2017

Robert D. Hoover passed away peacefully on July 25.

He was born in Salem, Ore., to Melford and Nelda (Crum) Hoover, was raised in the Buena Vista and Independence areas and graduated from Center High School in Independence.

He married Loretta Walters in 1968 and the couple raised six children, Randy Fitzgerald, the late Warren Fitzgerald, Laurel Chase, Dennis Hoover and Jeffrey Hoover. They had 11 grandchildren and numerous great grandchildren.

Hoover enlisted in the U.S. Air Force in 1961. He opened his own repair shop in Independence before working at numerous other television repair shops and retiring from Sears in 1999.

Family came first, but Hoover enjoyed flying, radio controlled planes and fishing. He was also an active member of the Keizer Elks Lodge #2472. He was an Elk for 49 years.
