Gubser neighborhood rakes in food, cash for Food Share

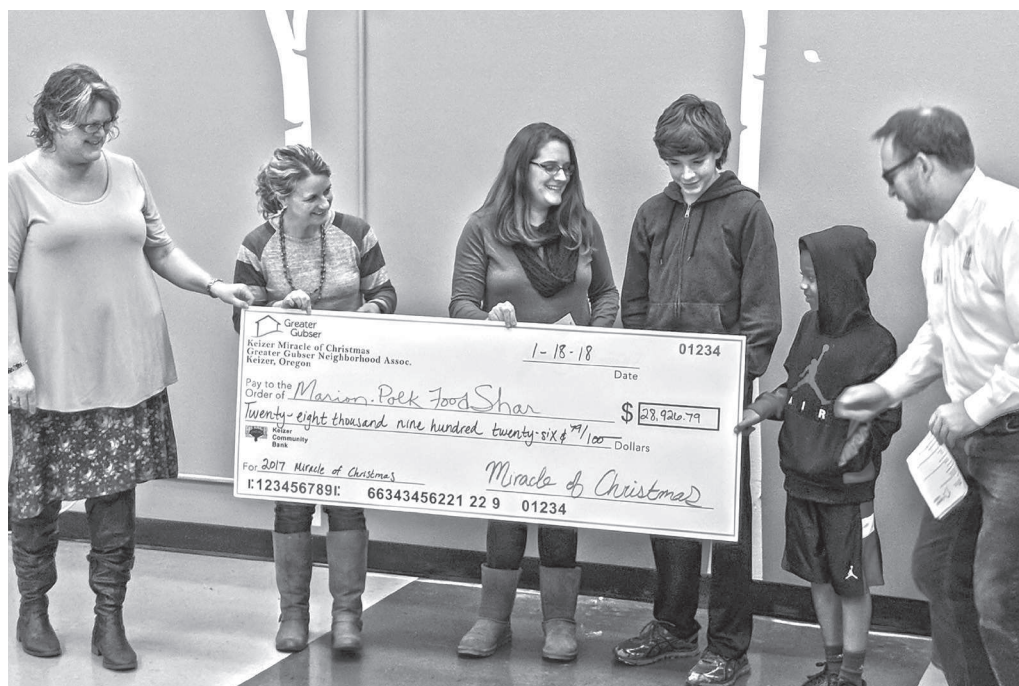

The Gubser Miracle of Lights Christmas had a banner 2017 season resulting in a major donation to the Marion-Polk Food Share at the Greater Gubser Neighborhood Association last week.

The 24-day run of the lights display yielded financial donations of $28,926.79 (an average of more than $1,000 per day) and record 27,180 pounds of donated food. Volunteers tending the donation booth also gave out a record 34,000 candy canes.

The cash donation is equivalent to more than 109,000 meals for local families in need, said Rick Guapo, president of the food share.

In the past five years, the Miracle of Light has generated more than 500,000 meals. The organizers were honored with the Oregon Food Bank Association's Hunger Buster Award in 2017.

More than 80 percent of the homes along the display route participated in the 2017 display.

Submitted Suzanne McConnell, GGNA president, organizers Jessica Ratliff, Brigett Eisele, Gavin Eisele and Isaiah Ratliff present a check for more than $28,000 to Rick Guapo of the Marion-Polk Food Share.

Sponsors this year included: Dana Burk representing Keller Williams, Brenda Oleman representing Serenity Cleaning, Maps Credit Union, Lisa and Devin Campbell representing Print Specialties, Gerald Nichols representing McKinley Landscape, John representing JK Timber and Lisa Lathan representing HomeSmart Realty.

Salem Reads kicks off Feb. 2

Salem Reads: One Book, One Community kicks off Feb. 2 with a month of activities and events in Salem and at the Salem Public Library. Salem Reads is a community reads program that invites the entire city to read the same book and enjoy programs built on the themes of the book.

Outcasts United by Warren St. John has been chosen for the second season of Salem Reads. It is the true story of a small, typical southern US town, transformed into one of the nation's most diverse communities as a refugee resettlement site. In Outcasts United, St. John explores the impact of this radical change on refugees and townspeople through the story of a youth soccer team called the Fugees.

Opening night is Tuesday Feb. 6, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. It features a free Outcasts United book give away and free author lecture tickets for Warren St. John's Feb. 27 visit. In addition, an Outcasts United inspired art exhibit by local artists that will remain on display at the library until March 4. Everyone is invited to attend.

The Salem Public Library will also host documentary films, facilitated conversations, a refugee panel, book club meetings and the author visit, all free to the public. Visit the library foundation's website at splfoundation.org for a complete listing of events.

School ped routes on city website

Parents looking for the best path for their kids to take to school have a new resource.

Wayne Frey, a member of the Keizer Traffic Safety, Bikeways and Pedestrian Committee, compiled an exhaustive list of potential walking routes to Keizer's schools and all of them are housed on the city's website, www.keizer.org.

To access to routes, go to the website, click on "Community" in the navigation bar and then selects "Walking Routes to Schools in Keizer."

The routes are streamlined to work with Android devices, but they work just as well on those produced by other companies as long as the user has the Google Maps app.

Select your child's school from the list and then find the route with the starting point nearest to your home. When you click on the link, the map will open in the Google Maps app.

Walking routes from every direction within a mile of the every Keizer school are available. On average, there are at least 30 routes to each school.

Sidewalk availability along the route is also noted next to each entry.

School board looks to rein in costs ahead of bond vote

By HERB SWETT
For the Keizertimes

Keeping costs under control was the focus of a work session the Salem-Keizer School Board held Tuesday.

The board heard Michael Wolfe, district chief operating officer, recommend the construction manager/general contractor method of running the school construction project that will be on the May ballot.

The usual method, Wolfe noted, has been contracting with a design professional that designs the project and advertises for bids from contractors, with the lowest bidders determining the actual cost of the project. This is known as the design-bid-build method.

Under Oregon law, however, alternative methods including that of the CM/GC are permitted for public agencies if they can show that certain circumstances make an alternative method more feasible. Such circumstances typically have been limited project delivery time, unusual technical complexity requiring specialized knowledge or skills, complicated project phasing, substantial work coordination issues, and limited project budget.

The last has been a district concern for the proposed project to build and expand buildings and ensure their seismic fitness. The CM/GC method involves a single contract with a company that uses a competitive selection process that requires considerable coordination and interaction. Once the design process reaches an acceptable level, the CM/GC typically submits a guaranteed maximum price.

Salem-Keizer successfully used CM/GC for the 2008 general obligation bond, Wolfe said.
