Church members spruce up Keizer cemetery

More than 50 members of the Clear Lake Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints spent part of their Memorial Day weekend pitching in at Claggett Creek Cemetery.

The effort is a component of a long-term partnership with the Claggett Creek Cemetery's sexton, Danny Lindquist. For the past 15 years, members of the ward have assisted with annual clean-ups.

In addition to raking leaves and pulling weeds, members of the church go as far as scrubbing headstones.

"Mr. Lindquist really works hard to make it look good, there are just some things he just doesn't have time or budget to do, we just want to help," said Bishop Langdon Smith of the Clear Lake Ward.

The Fairgrounds Ward of the church has been performing similar service at Jason Lee Cemetery, in Salem, during the same time period. Both Wards are based in Keizer.

In addition to the clean-ups, the cemetery has been the beneficiary of several Eagle Scout projects that were the result of the partnership with the church.
