with Mr. Nakvasil and his team and, though disappointed, certainly understand the business decision he was forced to make," said City Manager Christopher Eppley.

The termination of the ground lease ends a process that began in 2016 when a broker approached the city with a potential deal to lease the land and place a theater on the site. During the past two years, city staff and committees adjusted master plans and granted design variances to allow a theater to be erected on the property.

The ground lease was signed in January 2018. At the time, city officials and the project designer expected the theater to break ground in March with an expected opening in time for the major movie push around the holiday season later this year.

In recent months, access roads to the property and a cut-in for a new driveway were constructed as a shared expense between the city, Nakvasil and the owners of the adjacent property.

Under the terms of the lease, Keizer would have collected about $144,000 in rent each year. For the first 20 years, the broker would get a 20 percent share of those revenues. However, the estimated $120,000 annual income would have gone a long way to offsetting payments the city has had to make into the Public Employees Retirement System (PERS).

Keizertimes contacted Nakvasil's lawyer for more information about the gap between the expected construction costs and the actual bids, but had not received a response at press time.

The Keizer Station project was originally sold to the city with promise of a theater, but it has yet to materialize.

Attempt to reclaim a TV ends in arrest

A 25-year-old man was arrested while fleeing from an apartment building after he allegedly entered a unit and took a television.

Keizer police were called to the 1000 block of Hidden Creek Drive Northeast about 8 a.m. on Tuesday, June 26. The caller indicated a man had entered the apartment through a window and took the television.

Both the suspect and the victim knew each other and dated for approximately six months, but victim said the man had never lived at the apartment which meant he had no lawful right to enter the apartment.

The suspect fled the scene on foot before officers arrived, but he was located walking near the intersection of 11th Avenue Northeast and Manzanita Drive Northeast and taken into custody.

The suspect was later identified as Angel De Lao, 25.

De Lao told officers that he had, in fact, lived at the apartment and that the television was his. He was transported to Marion County Correction Facility where he was charged with one count of burglary.
