Rotarians pass gavel

The Rotary Club of Keizer held its annual installation banquet on Wednesday, June 27, with the surprise announcement about the Keizer Rotary Arboretum at Keizer Rapids Park.

Before the passing of the president's gavel, outgoing president Mark Caillier announced that the Keizer Rotary Arboretum would be named in honor of 52-year club member Wilbur Blum. Blum is horticulturalist Emeritus with the Oregon State University Extension Service. He also completed a tree inventory of Keizer in 2013 (there are 241 different types of trees in our city). Blum was surprised by the honor but he made no comments of his own.

The arboretum was planted as a response to a challenge from former Rotary International president Ian H.S. Riseley. He challenged the 33,000 clubs around the globe to plant a tree for each member of their local club for environmental sustainability. The first 36 trees of the Keizer arboretum were planted on Nov. 4. A total of 76 trees have been planted.

After the presentation to Blum the past presidents in attendance at the dinner gave the incoming president advice for his tenure. At the end Mark Caillier passed the president's gavel to A.J. Nash. Joining Nash on the 2018-19 Rotary Club of Keizer board are president-elect Raeanne McDonald, past president Caillier, treasurer Mark Baker,
