

9-1-1 call interrupts attempted assault

A Salem man allegedly broke into his ex-girlfriend's apartment with intent to assault her new boyfriend, but was foiled by a call to 9-1-1.

Shortly before midnight on Tuesday, Aug. 14, a man forced entry, through a window, into an apartment in the 1200 block of McGee Court Northeast. He then jumped on top of his intended victim while he was lying in bed. Once the victims said they were calling 9-1-1, the man fled on a bicycle.

Keizer police officers caught up to the suspect walking near the intersection of River Road North and Hidden Creek Drive Northeast. He was detained while officers at the residence interviewed the victims.

Tyler James Robertson, 35, of Salem, was arrested and transported to Marion County Correctional Facility and has since been charged with two counts of harassment, one count of criminal mischief and one count of burglary. In Oregon, burglary is defined as unlawful entry into a dwelling with the intent to commit a crime.

MASTURBATING MAN SLIPS POLICE

A man spotted lying on the ground and pleasuring himself near the trail next to the boat ramp in Keizer Rapids Park managed to elude arrest Sunday, Aug. 19.

Keizer police officers were called to the park just after noon. The caller said another couple walked by the man and said what he was doing was inappropriate. As soon as he was called out, the man got to his feet, pulled up his pants and ran east toward the boat ramp parking lot.

Several officers responded but were unable to locate the suspect who had bleached blond hair and was wearing a black T-shirt and black shorts. No age, weight, height or race were recorded in the police report.
