Today in History

Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory collectively enter the United States as Oklahoma, the 46th state. Oklahoma, with a name derived from the Choctaw Indian words okla, meaning "people," and humma, meaning "red," has a history of human occupation dating back 15,000 years. The first Europeans to visit the region were Spanish explorers in the 16th century, and in the 18th century the Spanish and French struggled for control of the territory. The United States acquired Oklahoma from France in 1803 as part of the Louisiana Purchase.

looking into: sustainable methods for overseeing operations like the park, short-term goals and priorities for improvements and planning for future uses and opportunities such as tournaments.

Keizer Little League Park is owned by the city but, to date, youth sports organizations operate and manage the facility under a contract with the city.

While the investment by Keizer Little League has never been called into question, the organization came under suspicion earlier this year when it was revealed KLL was withholding more than $15,000 in slot fees it owed the park complex while requesting that the city council retroactively revise the conditions of the management contract to allow the managing group to keep half of the proceeds from the park's concession stand.

In the end, the gambit paid off. The city council allowed KLL to keep roughly $13,500 in concession stand sales in exchange for paying the slot fees.

The history of KLL Park is storied, but there have been several bumps in the road dating back a decade. A small army of community volunteers linked arms and brought the park into existence almost four decades ago, but a schism in the youth sports leagues in 2008 has made management of the facility a contentious issue. Until that point, the KLL organization had managed the park.

The schism birthed KYSA (now known as McNary Youth Baseball) while Keizer Little League continued to operate on a parallel track. KYSA was then given the contract to manage the facility, but by the end of its tenure, in 2014, the park had fallen into serious disrepair. After the city balked at providing funding to restore the park, KLL was again given the contract. KYSA ended its tenure as park managers and members of its leadership took with them several pieces of equipment they maintained belonged to them - including some items that predated their contract for management.

KLL's latest tenure as manager has seen the park largely restored through grants and private donations, but the organization was asked three times in the past 18 months for a detailed budget that was only produced with the assistance of city staff.

DOMAIN: Deal needed by Dec. 15 to avoid delays

Under the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, federal, state and local governments can condemn private property and take ownership of it for public use while compensating the owner for the fair market value.

The vacant land is needed by McNary High School to expand the existing school buildings, reconfigure traffic circulation patterns, meet parking requirements and relocate athletic fields.

An agreement to purchase the property must be reached by Dec. 15 in order to complete the renovations on time—end of August, 2019.

HART,

Hart was born to Michael J. Hart and Rosalyn Perkins Hart on Jan. 30, 1942 in Tacoma, Wash. His father was headed for a deployment in the South Pacific with the U.S. Army at the time. Hart's mother died suddenly of polio when he was 2 years old, and he spent the remainder of his father's deployment with his paternal grandparents. When his father returned from the war in June 1946, he married Rita Smith and the family grew to include three more boys - Larry, Jim and David - and a sister, Linda.

The family moved to the Portland area when Hart was 10 and deployed to Okinawa together for a year before returning to Tacoma.

Hart graduated from Belarmine Catholic High School, in Tacoma, in 1960, and enlisted in the Army when he turned 18. He attended boot camp at Ft. Ord in California immediately after graduating. While in the service, Mike worked in supply at Scofield Barracks on Oahu and reached the rank of sergeant. He considered making the Army his career but, after three years, he was ready for civilian life.

When he left the Army, Hart moved to Portland where his family had relocated. He worked for a finance company that took him to St. Helens and later to Clatskanie. He left Clatskanie for Salem in early 1970 to work for the Oregon Jaycees as their executive director. He met and married Betty the same year.

In 1976, the Harts bought a home in Keizer. When Keizer became an incorporated city, Hart ran for the original city council. He came in seventh and was appointed to the city council a few months later when it was expanded from five to seven members. He served on the council for ten years. In the late 1990s, Hart became involved with the Keizer Fire District, serving first on a long-range planning committee for the district then running for its board of directors. He remained a longtime advocate for the fire district and its employees. After leaving the Oregon Jaycees, Mike worked in sales, mostly at various radio stations, ending his career at KBZY in 2004.

In addition to his other roles within the area's community, Hart served as executive director for the Salem Softball Association in the early 1980s, volunteered for The United Way, as an umpire for Little League and was an active supporter of Girl Scouts of America.

Among the most notable honors Hart received for his work were: recognition as a Paul Harris Fellow for his efforts with Keizer's Rotarians; being named Junior First Citizen by the Salem Jaycees and one of five Outstanding
