 Ian Martin earned second-team all-league honors as a sophomore. He was arguably McNary's best infielder this season and batted .312.

File
 Rennick Jeffries was a honorable mention performer for the Celtics as he led the team in strikeouts (49) and wins (3).

ethic was fantastic.”

Ian Martin- (sophomore) infielder: Second-team all-league.

Martin patrolled second base for the Celtics this season and had a fielding percentage of .952 with only three errors. He also batted .312 with a OBP of .375.

What his coach says:

“Ian is one of our better infielders, which is why we had him playing in the middle. He has some really quick hands and had a very high fielding percentage ... His bat really came alive late in the league season and had some really nice games for us after bouncing him around the lineup.”

Rennick Jeffries- (junior) pitcher: Honorable mention.

Jeffries showed he had filthy stuff throughout the season and led McNary in strikeouts (49) and wins (3). He also had an ERA of 4.07.

What his coach says:

“Rennick’s potential is sky high in terms of fastball velocity and being able to throw a breaking pitch. But the thing I’m most proud about was the progress he has made with his composure. He battled through stressful situations and I know that he will continue to grow ... He was our number two guy on the hill this year and next year, he will probably be our number one.”

Noah Bach- (senior) outfielder: Honorable mention.

Bach batted .242 this season and had two home runs — making him the only Celtics player with multiple dingers. He also knocked in 12 and had an OBP of .373.

What his coach says:

“Noah does have the ability to hit the home run and his defense improved enough that we could put him in left field and rely on him to make the routine plays he supposed to make ... He was a great senior teammate and I’m really proud of the success he had.”
