

went to the half with a 42-6 lead.

When the Celtics came out of the locker room and received the ball to start the second half, they approached things much differently on the offensive side of the ball.

Auvinen got Junior Walling much more involved with the game plan in the third quarter after Walling got just two touches in the first half.

The senior moved the chains three separate times in the first drive of the third quarter, getting the ball into the red zone. After an 18-yard run by Barker put the ball at the one-yard line, Walling punched it in from there for his second rushing score of the season.

"We quit messing around and went right at them. We wanted to establish a little bit of an identity and play more physical," Auvinen said. "We want to use (Walling) as much as we possibly can."

Tualatin responded when Griffin Biggs crossed the goal line from a yard out. But McNary was quick to answer back.

Barker found Thurlow downfield on an out route to get the Celtics into Tualatin territory. Moments later, Walling found the end zone once again on a 36-yard run up the sideline.

Walling finished the game with 152 rushing yards and two touchdowns on just 15 carries, all in front of Oregon State football coach Jonathan Smith, who will be Walling's coach next season.

With the game out of reach, Auvinen put in backup quarterback Jack McCarty on the Celtics final series. After completing three passes resulting in first downs, the junior signal-caller took it in himself with a one-yard touchdown run on a quarterback draw, putting the Celtics sideline in high spirits with less than two minutes remaining.

"We're definitely really proud of how we came to together in the second half," Martin said.

Auvinen added: "We still have a ways to go to get where we want to be, but I think we took a step in the right direction."

McNary starts the more manageable portion of their schedule on Friday, Sept. 27 when they take on the Barlow Bruins in their final non-league home game.

Despite getting his jersey pulled, McNary offensive lineman Michael Ridgway stays on his block to free up a lane for the ballcarrier.
