Today in History

Following up on their successful November 1985 summit meeting in Geneva, President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev meet in Reykjavik, Iceland, to continue discussions about curbing their intermediate missile arsenals in Europe. Just when it appeared that agreement might be reached, the talks fell apart amid accusations and recriminations, and U.S.-Soviet relations took a giant step backwards.

10 QUESTIONS

How are you seeing the trade war impact the Oregon?

SCHRADER: A lot of farmers that are very, very, very concerned and hanging on by their fingernails. We've got some small business people in the same boat. China's a huge market. Mexico and Canada are our biggest markets. If we just do a little more on the labor provisions [in the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement], make them a little more enforceable then I think we have a potentially great deal.

What issues are you hearing about most from constituents?

SCHRADER: The whole cost of healthcare and prescription drugs have gotten out of control. It's going to be difficult because the acrimony has gotten a little worse. We're trying to draw a little sunlight on costs and make sure that consumers are protected. By fixing the Affordable Care Act, we get the cost sharing back in, do the reinsurance, allow the states to do a few more waivers and be a little more innovative. Those are doable, but they get caught up in the abortion debate.

Congress did manage to pass the rebocall bill, what do you hope the outcome of that will be aside from fewer annoyances?

SCHRADER: Part of the bill serves notice to the provider networks that they have to do some responsible policing. I don't want providers making money off of people that are harassing or taking advantage of innocent Americans. It's not just about you providing a service. With that service comes responsibility. It means they have to monitor who's on your network, who's taking advantage of your network.

There is a national debt counter on your website, what can be done to slow or reverse its course given the present divides in Congress and the nation?

SCHRADER: The real issue on our debt deficit is in our safety net programs. Medicare and Social Security are going to go negative and in the not too distant future. It means you got to talk about increasing the payroll accounts subject to the tax and maybe change the inflation rate. I think my colleagues underestimate the intelligence of folks out there. They understand we got a problem and I don't think there's a single grandparent or single parent out there that wants to take Social Security or Medicare away from their kids or grandkids. We've got to solve this problem together.

Are there any policies or actions the Trump Administration has taken that you agree with?

SCHRADER: I'm supportive of our National Guard, super supportive of our veterans, but I do not support endless foreign invention at great cost to an American taxpayer. It's time for [other nations] to step up and pay their fair share. They're no longer struggling, reconstructing nations. These developed nations should be able to get behind the wheel a little bit, too. I think America should still be a leader. We're looked upon as leaders, but it shouldn't be our job to foot the tab for everybody else.

What matters should we be paying more attention to in Oregon?

SCHRADER: The Willamette Basin Review. It will determine how we use water going forward and meet the needs of farmers, fish, the environment and drinking needs. We're spending a lot of time on that. My office can't influence the outcome, but we can make sure all the stakeholders understand what's going on and meet with the principals. It's not newsworthy back east, but it is certainly hugely newsworthy here.

You held a hearing on the Chemawa Indian School earlier this year to try to get answers on the care of students there. How did it go?

SCHRADER: That hearing was terrible. Terrible because, frankly, the school administration was not ready for it. I think they showed that they were less than genuine, honest with us about what was going on. The good outcome was that my colleagues heard what we heard a year ago and she spoke pretty clearly that she seen the same thing back in the Midwest where she's from. The head Bureau of Indian Education reached out to us after the hearing for a meeting in our office. We sat down with them, went through some of our concerns and they indicated that they are with us. They want to work on some of this stuff, but they're constrained by all these federal regulations. So instead of being able to run it like a school, they have to run like a federal agency. The superintendent and her top staff lifted the gag order [preventing school staff from talking with congressional representatives]. That was my biggest issue.

Keizer Fire responds to 2 fires in 3 days

On Wednesday, Oct. 2, at 11:58 p.m., Keizer Fire District (KFD) responded to a fire at Courtside Manor Apartments on Wheatland Road.

Keizer Police Department arrived prior to KFD and began evacuating apartments.

Firefighters arrived to find heavy smoke and flame coming from the rear of the apartment near Wheatland Rd. The fire started at the exterior of the apartment complex and spread into one apartment and the common attic space.

Marion County Fire District and Salem Fire also assisted with fire suppression. Keizer Public Works helped by closing Wheatland Road for approximately two hours while the fire crews were at work. Nineteen firefighters responded to the scene on four engines, one medic unit, one squad, one battalion chief and one investigator.

Four apartments were affected by the fire. In all, seven adults, six children, three dogs, one cat and one saltwater aquarium were displaced by the fire.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Just two days later, Keizer firefighters were dispatched to a working shop fire at 7 p.m. Firefighters arrived to a building in the 1200 block of Candlewood Drive to find fire and heavy smoke at the rear of the building. Deputy Fire Marshal Anne-Marie Storms also said that there were explosions coming from the inside of the building — which isn't unusual according to Storms.

Three engines, one ladder, a medic unit and a battalion chief responded with 16 firefighters.

Crews were on scene for two and a half hours working on cooling hot spots. The fire is currently under investigated.

Many Oregonians stand to lose SNAP benefits if the administration moves forward with new USDA rules, what is being done in Congress to either fight the action or shore up other benefits that could fill in the gap?

SCHRADER: When you start putting one-size-fits-all rules to restrict benefits, you're restricting them to kids, pregnant ladies and older people, too. We need to make sure families have access. A more nuanced approach would be providing gradations of benefits as people move up the chain socioeconomically, getting a little better job, getting a little more pay.

Are you concerned about the current approach to natural resources?

SCHRADER: We actually had bipartisan support for longterm funding for the land water conservation fund. If these guys are drilling, at least let's let some of those royalties go into protecting the land. It's a twin-edged sword, but if we're going to allow some of this economic development in areas that depend on it, let's reap the benefits from an environmental standpoint.
