Today in History

For the first time in 40 years, the Republican Party wins control of both the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate in midterm congressional elections. Led by Representative Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the empowered GOP united under the "Contract with America," a 10-point legislative plan to reduce federal taxes, balance the budget, and dismantle social welfare programs established during six decades of mostly Democratic rule in Congress.

a round of double-doubles for the traffic planning team.
Keizertimes talked with local leaders about their plans for the opening and city managers in Medford and Grants Pass about their experiences with an In-N-Out opening in their towns.
"We have been in discussions with In-N-Out for months now regarding traffic upon their opening. We are going to allow them to take the lead on traffic control because they have a lot of experience surrounding the topic," said Chris Eppley, Keizer city manager.
Eppley said the city will have resources standing by to help, but "realistically, our resources will be overwhelmed immediately."
In the previous Oregon openings, private security personnel were hired to help direct traffic in the area around the locations. While there are numerous areas in Keizer Station where In-N-Out traffic could stack and pull cars off streets, it remains to be seen how many other shopping center tenants will be willing to part with those spaces in the run-up to Christmas.

Eppley said Keizer Station has some capacity to absorb burger-lovers, but that it is possible traffic will spill over to Interstate 5. The highway is the jurisdiction of the Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT). ODOT isn't making any special plans for the opening, said Lou Torres, an ODOT spokesperson.
"The In-N-Out location is a good one-half mile from the I-5 Chemawa Interchange. It is hard to believe that folks will want to wait in a queue that long for a hamburger," Torres said. "However, ODOT is not planning to do anything special regarding the opening."
Cherriots also plans to monitor traffic as the restaurant opens. If logjams occur, there might be impacts to bus traffic passing through the Keizer Station transit center.
"If traffic starts to impede Cherriots routes, we will detour buses around Keizer Station," said Allan Pollack, Cherriots general manger.
On weekdays, detours may affect Route 11 - Lancaster/Verda, Route 12 - Hayesville Drive, and Route 14 - Windsor Island Road. On Saturdays, Route 11 - Lancaster/Verda and Route 19 - Broadway/River Road may be affected. Riders should visit Cherriots.org/alerts for the latest updates on any detours or stop closures in Keizer Station.

"Realistically, our resources will be overwhelmed immediately."

Keizer city manager

Brian Sjothun, current Medford city manager, was overseeing the city's parks at the time In-N-Out opened and said the company brings in its A-team for the first couple of weeks.
"They were a really valuable resource to have as far as training their employees but also for handling general operations and traffic issues,"

Sjothun said. "I think the car stacking in the parking lot of the mall was brilliant."
For Medford, the opening of an In-N-Out paid off in other ways as well. Because the chain prides itself on the freshness of its ingredients, it opened up a small distribution center in the city to serve other locations in the region.
In Grants Pass, City Manager Aaron Cubic said plans developed by In-N-Out that included some additional help from the city's public safety department went off without a hitch. There also wasn't a traffic impact that lasted weeks as it did in Medford.
"During this same time, we had a number of new businesses and building retrofits in this same area and do not have any data that separates out In-N-Out impact," Cubic said. "We have certainly seen a rise in our tourism stats, though I cannot contribute them to In-N-Out at this time."
Back in Medford, Sjothun said most locals waited a few weeks before venturing into the joint, but admitted "the experience is kind of fun."

ROMAN,

"The biggest thing I learned was how to sit down at a table with someone who has a concern. That is a huge strength to have," Roman said.
As far as policy, Roman said she is a supporter of the Timber Unity movement that opposed cap and trade carbon reduction plans in Oregon, she remains a strong advocate of veteran support services and opposes protections for undocumented immigrants. Roman's children are half-Mexican.
"I'm one of the chief petitioners to repeal the driver's licenses for illegal aliens," she said.
She said the immigration challenges at the border are a crises for Democrats and Republicans, but there are solutions to alleviate the problems.
"At a bare minimum, each state should send one Constitutional judge to the border to alleviate the backlog. Send them down there to help with the asylum judges and start getting people processed," Roman said. "There are people that need to come here, there are families escaping persecution from cartels."

Those looking for more information about Roman and her campaign, can visit angelaromanforcongress.com, but don't be surprised if searching for her name yields reports of a 2017 arrest for supplying a felon with a firearm. Roman pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge and served four days in jail.
Roman was participating in a 3-percenter protest and said she gave her Ruger pistol to another member of the group, Matthew Heagy. Heagy is a veteran and also a convicted felon who cannot possess firearms.
"A fight broke out. He jumped in to try to retrieve this old ladies' flag. Someone yelled gun. He didn't even pull it out," Roman said. "I told the judge, I would do it all over again."
Her stand on the arrest aligns with what she most wanted potential supporters to know about her.
"At the end of the day, I believe in the Constitution and I believe in everybody's freedom as long as they're not pushing for violence against others. I'm here to protect their rights to feel how they want - just keep your hands to yourself," she said.
