the terrain and has maximum speed of about 18 mph. The only major modification Search made to his was lowering the seat about an inch from the factory specs.

The enclosed cab means Search can travel rain or shine, something of an upgrade from the Segway. It even has a windshield wiper. Lights and blinkers keep other traffic aware of his presence. He can turn on flashers to let other vehicles know he is traveling at a slower rate of speed. A small trunk allows him to make quick trips to the store without having hold items on his lap while attempting to drive. Most of all, it’s kind of a blast to drive – even on a short trip around the KeizerTimes parking lot.

Before pulling the trigger on a purchase, Search ran all the specs past Lt. Trevor Wenning at the Keizer Police Department just to make sure he wouldn’t run afoul of any laws operating one in Keizer.

“He was wonderful about it and he came back to let me

PRISON: Suspect kept in contact with victims despite police investigation

The second victim told police that she had met Myers through another underage victim and it led to the sexual relationship.

Myers also regularly supplied her with marijuana.

The third victim was only 13 years old when a sexual relationship developed between her and Myers. Myers was 19.

She later recanted the allegations, but police presented her with text and Facebook messages that appeared to confirm a sexual relationship.

UNWILLING TO STOP

Myers initially denied contact with any of the girls when he was contacted by police. He described the victims as acquaintances that “have a crush on me.”

When presented with messages that appeared to confirm sexual relationships, Myers told police “I wish it never took place” and “there is not much explaining I could do.”

In the two months before pleading guilty, the Marion County District Attorney’s Office received three anonymous phone calls from a young girl shaking and crying. The caller reported that Myers was continuing to contact underage girls online and in person. As a result, a release agreement was revoked.

PLEA DODGED JURY TRIAL

Myers faced up to 12-and-a-half years in prison if he had been convicted by a jury. The district attorney’s office recommended 48 months based on Myers lack of a prior record. He pleaded guilty to four counts of rape in the third degree.

to the Keizer Chamber of Commerce.

When KeizerTimes asked him about the secret to longevity, Casterline quipped, “Pick good ancestors.”

Ray & Louise Boucher

Ray and Louise Boucher opened Keizer’s first jewelry store in 1950. Ray passed away on October 12 and Louise followed on October 21.

At the time they opened the store, Keizer was mostly fields and orchards. To keep the business afloat, the couple offered free beef with purchases. It led to Keizer tradition for a while. The Bouchers were married for 66 years.

Boucher’s Jewelers remains a staple of the local community. Sons Jeff and Steve now own the business.

Dr. Jerry Bowerly

Jerry Bowerly met his longtime friend Vern Casterline through a cousin. The two worked out a business plan and opened Keizer’s first medical-dental office with a pharmacy to boot.

As a Navy reserve officer, Bowerly provided dentistry services to fellow veterans one night a week in Salem. He was a charter member of the Keizer Lions, the first president of the Keizer Art Association and an active member and leader in his church.

Bowerly, who passed away in October at the age of 99, remained active throughout his life. He water skied until the age of 74 and snow skied until age 84.

Greg Frank

Greg Frank led the Keizer Fire District for 17 years as chief, he joined the district as a volunteer nine years before that. He passed away in November after a long battle said. He tries to stick to bike paths, but the occasional trash can forces him into other spaces.

The new lease on mobility came with a fairly steep price tag, retail costs are $5,000 to $7,000 and can be written off on tax returns as a medical expense, but it was a cost well worth the return on investment.

“What people don’t realize is when you have a disability is how much independence you lose. And once you start losing your independence, you lose self-esteem,” Search said. “This keeps me up and moving every day.”

Deputy District Attorney Alexandra Overton wrote that Myers continued to manipulate his victims after the investigation asking them to “cover for him” while he continued to prey on them.

During a psychological evaluation, Myers continued to blame his victims for the relationships that developed.

“All of these victims had difficulties at home, all of them were runaways. The defendant preyed on their vulnerability and continued to prey on their naivete when he began relationships with all of them ... knowing they had no one else to turn to,” Overton wrote.

Myers will have to register as a sex offender and he retains the right to appeal his sentence.
