enough firefighters to respond," said McMann. "In many cases, we have to rely on mutual aid from neighboring agencies, which takes longer to reach people in an emergency. We need to do better for the people we serve."

The fire district is asking voters to consider increasing its operating levy from 71 to 99 cents per $1,000 of assessed property value. Most of the 28-cent increase would fund two additional firefighter/paramedics and a deputy fire marshal — a small portion would be dedicated to routine apparatus replacement.

MCFD#1 currently relies on full-time and volunteer personnel to staff its engines. Volunteer participation has declined 52.4 percent since 2013. This impacts the district's ability to get an effective response force on scene.

Two more firefighters would enable the district to guarantee staffing a third engine seven days a week to respond to emergencies. McMann believes that a guaranteed third engine during busiest times would make a difference to saving lives and property.

In the last week of December, three calls were dispatched to the district within 10 minutes. Two engines were already on calls, and there were not enough firefighters to staff the third. As a result, MCFD#1 had to reach out to a neighboring agency for mutual aid.

In October of 2019, there was a serious accident involving semi-trucks and cars on I-5. Again, there were only two staffed engines, and both were dispatched to the accident scene. This took one engine away from the high call volume area where it is normally stationed, resulting in a delayed response time to the accident and other calls for service.

"Two more firefighters would guarantee that third engine during the busiest time of day between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. This means we can get to an emergency faster and maintain an engine in high call volume areas, which is safer for our citizens," said McMann.

STRIPES: Reflectors would be a costly alternative

(Continued from Page A1) were striping the road and they said they had increased the air pressure as the result of information they got at a conference," Lawyer said.

Contrary to intuition, the reflective properties of lane stripes do not come from the paint itself. The source is actually glass beads blown into the paint in a two-step process.

When a car's headlights shine on a pavement marking embedded with glass beads, the beads reflect the light back and are supposed to make them easier to see at night. Increased air pressure might have blown the beads too far into the painted pavement for them to work effectively, but Lawyer also investigated past invoices for striping work.

"I hoped to find out how many pounds of beads were used when they did the striping, but the invoices only say what we were charged," Lawyer said. "It didn't lead anywhere."

The city paid $12,000 for beads in 2019, $9,000 in 2018 and $12,000 in 2017.

Given that the county's striping machine is out of service, Lawyer looked into the possibility of putting reflectors in place, but the cost escalated quickly. When he found ones that he deemed sufficient quality, they were $9 apiece. Placing reflectors on a half-mile stretch of River Road North would be roughly $3,600, but the costs wouldn't end there.

"Reflectors are a maintenance nightmare," Lawyer said. "Once you put them down, you have to keep them down."
