Janette Marie (Stratton) Stewart

Aug. 28, 1925 – March 25, 2020

On Wednesday March 25, 2020, Janette Marie (Stratton) Stewart passed to her heavenly home at age 94.

Janette was born on August 28, 1925 in Brownsville, Ore. to Byron Elmore Stratton and Vida Marie (Miller) Stratton. She graduated from Salem High School in 1943.

Janette was preceded in death by her husband Joseph, her brother Allen, and her grandson Dan. She is survived by daughters Janis, Rebecca and Barbara; grandchildren James, Jim, Cris, Cisco, Armando, Jesse and Tracy; 13 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandson.

Janette was an award-winning correspondent for the Oregon Statesman newspaper, an Allstate Insurance industrial editor for a five-state region and a freelance writer who appeared in Oregon Coast, Redbook, Discover Magazine, as well as the Statesman-Journal, Keizertimes, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the San Francisco Chronicle and other publications.

She was a long time volunteer at Silver Falls State Park as a park host, lodge receptionist, and nature walk leader. She developed a study and brochure for the Calypso Orchid and edited the Trail's End newsletter. She twice served on the Board of Directors of the Friends of Silver Falls and she received the top volunteer award in 1994.

Janette served two terms on the Board of Directors, edited the monthly bulletin and staged fund raising programs for the Keizer/Salem Senior Center over an 18-year span.

Janette loved music, tapped her toes and clapped her hands to great barbershop and a capella music. She also sang with two barbershop choruses in the Salem-Keizer area.

She considered her family one of her greatest accomplishments, and loved them all.

Janette especially enjoyed the support of her granddaughter Cris, who provided loving nursing care during the last few years of her life.

A private burial will be held next week. A celebration of life will be announced at a future date.

Funeral arrangements were by Restlawn Funeral Home.

members at JoAnn's in Salem what she was working on and received some extra yards of high-quality cotton. However, both found themselves running short on elastic for the bands to attach them to faces, and each found unique solutions.

Belleque tried to substitute oversized hair ties, but they didn't stand up to repeated wearing.

"Right now, I'm using large, wide rubber bands," Belleque said. "They aren't the prettiest thing, but they hold up. I don't want anyone to go away with defective masks."

Donily sent her daughter and husband on a trip to the dollar store and bought out the entire stock of elastic headbands.

"I cut them in half and I can get a couple of masks out of each one," Donily said.

Submitted

A few of the many masks made by Keizerite Sharon Belleque.

Donily enlists her son and daughter, who she homeschools, to help in the production and binges streaming shows while she works, which is one reason she doesn't have a tally of how many she's produced.

"My biggest problem is I'm running out of shows to watch," Donily said.

Donily is focused on getting masks to organizations with a part in responding to the pandemic, but Belleque is making masks for anyone who contacts her. She's even arranged for no-contact pick-up at her home.

"I put them in paper bags with the person's name on it and then they go out into a box on my porch for people to pick up. They've left me all sorts of gifts and donations in return," Belleque said. "Every one of them has made me cry. There's so many people out there and we're all scared."

Donily said taking part in the response is a way to model the change she hopes results from the weirdness of the times we are living in.

"That would be the best outcome for this whole thing, to regain some sort of sense of communal responsibility," Donily said.

"We wanted to offer this to the wider community to help them get in some movement when they are more or less stuck at home," Clews said. "Our goal is to come out of this pandemic stronger than ever and to show everyone that through adaptability and innovation, there is a light at the end of this very dark tunnel."
