On April 15, McNary High School alum Payton Williams celebrated five years since his last chemotherapy treatment and his family wasn't about to let the milestone pass unmarked, pandemic or not.

Payton's family arranged for friends to celebrate with him in the parking lot at Whiteaker Middle School. They drove Payton to the school blindfolded and, when unmasked, he found himself surrounded by friends, family and well-wishers.

Williams was diagnosed with soft-tissue sarcoma between his junior and senior years at McNary.

Payton always projected a happy-go-lucky around the school even as he battled the disease. When a local non-profit that supports families whose children are fighting cancer asked him if there was anything he wanted, Williams replied he had everything he wanted – good friends and a great family.

It was only much later he decided "a giraffe would be nice."

Now 23, Payton hoping to return to school at Oregon State University after some treatment for severe back pain sidelined him during his junior year. Hopefully, the pandemic doesn't get in the way of that, too.

Chemawa biz offers on-demand bagged ice

You know the routine. You buy ice at the grocery store and then have to slam it repeatedly into the ground or some other surface before it fits in the cooler.

Never again.

Chemawa Deli & Market is now offering fresh-bagged ice at a self-service station outside the market at 388 Chemawa Road N.

Look for the large blue box that says Fresh Ice. Ice that is bagged when it is purchased and uses filtered water that requires no human interaction.

Ice is $2 for 10 pounds and $3.50 for 20 pounds. Water is a quarter a gallon or $1 for five gallons. The machine takes coins, cash, and credit/debit card.
