

GARDEN,

The garden has grown extensively in the 11 years it has been operating.

The garden was created through a bond with Marion Polk Food Share (MPFS) that was designed to plant community gardens as a means of addressing food insecurity. It was a natural fit. John Knox was the original home of the Keizer Community Food Bank before its services outgrew the space available.

Emmet said the grant from Keizer United helped them purchase soil and chicken manure to help give the garden necessary nutrients.

According to Emmet, when community gardens were first being planted they were all in-ground gardens. Now they tend to be a collection of raised beds rather than plots of land. The John Knox Community Garden is in the process of transitioning to the raised box model, which the bags of soil will be used to fill.

The chicken manure, however, will be mixed into the plant-based compost that is provided by MPFS to give greater nutrients throughout the garden.

received and I am sure our board will revisit this idea for the next fiscal year. Probably in spring next time around, since we had such a late start on it this year," Mooney said.

If the John Knox garden receives this grant again at the beginning of the growing season, Emmet said they will likely use it to plant flowers that attract monarch butterflies — another project the MPFS garden network is working on.

OUR STORY

Meet the people that make your community newspaper

Since 1987, the Keizertimes has been proud to be honored with more than 60 first place awards bestowed by the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association, as judged by members of press associations from states around the country.

WHY THE KEIZERTIMES?
I have been fascinated by the newspaper industry ever since I can remember. I even used to wrestle my dad for the sports section every morning as a youngster. After working for a newspaper in Portland for a couple years, it's a privilege to now be working for a great publication near the place where I grew up.

COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS:
Local newspapers are unique and important because they often provide pertinent information to the public that, most of the time, you can't read anywhere else. For example, you can read about the Blazers and Seahawks in numerous publications. But usually, you can only read about things like McNary athletics in the Keizertimes. Our staff is passionate about providing the best possible coverage for the town of Keizer.
