of color disadvantaged and in fear at the hands of oppressive forces," said Omar Alvarado.

Ramiro "RJ" Navarro told the story of a Latinx woman who texted him while her landlord was trying to evict her from a home in Keizer. The woman gave birth to a child four days before moving in and the landlord began lodging complaints against her almost immediately, Navarro said.

people feel included, stop protecting racists. It's as simple as that," Navarro said. "Listen to the people of color, the ones who don't need to hear examples (of racism) because they experience it every day."

Mayor Cathy Clark said

"The council is meant to represent the community and it is tiptoeing around these issues for the sake of white fragility," added Elizabeth Heredia. "Words matter a lot in our reality. Think about that and the responsibility you have to protect all of your constituents, not just a few."

Resident Betty Hart suggested that members of the council do more homework.

"BLM is not a hate group, it is a movement to bring light to issues people have faced for hundreds of years. I hope you will take the time to look up Jim Crow laws and the Tulsa

Resident LaTonya Gibbs suggested that a deeper understanding of the issues was a matter of empathy.

"A small city or government of any sort isn't a business, it's a community. If we can't find a sense of empathy for the people who live nearby, then we are lost," said Gibbs.

Another longtime resident, Bob Salazar said, when he moved to town, Keizer had a reputation for not being welcoming, but he was lucky to find supportive neighbors.

"The color of my skin still tells people who they think I am, but they don't know me." Salazar said."The more we can say in our values that white supremacy is something we will not accept, the better off we are."

drew on his experiences being married into a black family for 25 years and took issue with Clark's use of the word "incomprehensible" when it came to the eviction predicament faced by another Keizer resident.

"Eyes get big and eyebrows are raised to something that is incomprehensible to us, but it is simply a reality to somebody else. They comprehend the incomprehensible very well. They can smell it. They can taste it. We can see it, smell it and taste it if we choose to look that direction," Poteet said."Not comprehending isn't an excuse for not condemning white supremacy,"

Poteet also addressed the chair typically occupied by Kohler whose particular comments ignited the backlash.

"This is an action taken very often in government, when the people speak the politicians are absent and that is incomprehensible," Poteet said.

Clark said it was a poor word choice on her part, "I do understand that it happens to people. I comprehend that it happens in this city, but I don't understand the thought process that goes through people's heads."

Wesley H. Tombleson

Jan. 1, 1924 - Oct. 28, 2020

Wesley was the seventh child of Roscoe and Mary Tombleson, born near Lamar, Colo., on Jan. 1, 1924 and moved with his family in 1927-28 to Rainier, Ore., where he lived until he graduated from Rainier High School in 1942. Upon learning his brother had been drafted, he joined the Navy and served on the U.S.S. Bluegill, a submarine in the Pacific during WWII as a torpedoman. He went on to graduate from Oregon State College in 1950 with a bachelor's of science in industrial administration.

On Veteran's Day in 1950, he married Beverly Norman and they were married until her death in 2011. They had two children, Janet Wallace, of Keizer, and Craig, of Eugene. He worked various jobs that including at Sears before being hired by State Farm Insurance where he worked from 1959-1995, he started in underwriting and then moved into claims adjusting. He enjoyed most of his career.

He loved to laugh. He enjoyed sports, especially golf and had three lifetime holes-in-one and played in many tournaments over the years. After full retirement, he drove out to Santiam Golf Course five days a week and enjoyed his "five-mile-walk" every day. He only stopped golfing in 2010 due to memory issues. He really enjoyed swimming with his family and granddaughter Angie remembers him swimming underwater the whole length of the pool with her on his back.

He came to Jesus late in life and although he had memory issues at the time, Jesus remembers and heals all our weaknesses where there are no more tears, no more sorrows. Wesley passed away on Oct. 28, 2020 at the age of 96.

He is survived by his daughter, Janet, and son, Craig, grandchildren, Jeff (Adrienne) Wallace, Angie, David and Douglas and seven great-grandchildren.

Many thanks go to the great staff at Sweet Bye N Bye and Signature Hospice. Assisting the family is Virgil T. Golden Funeral Service.
