and 64 RBIs.

Sandoval batted over .300 in the NL Division series (NLDS) and NLCS, helping the Giants get to their second World Series in three years.

In game one of the 2012 World Series against the Detroit Tigers, Sandoval cemented himself into World Series lore by hitting three home runs and leading the Giants to the 8-3 win. Sandoval joined Babe Ruth, Reggie Jackson and Albert Pujols as the only players to ever hit three homers in a World Series game. Sandoval went 8-for-16 at the plate in the series and was named World Series MVP as the Giants swept the Tigers in four games.

Sandoval's 24 playoff hits, including six home runs, were a new Giants record for a single postseason. Sandoval also won the Babe Ruth Award in 2012, which is annually given to the player with the best performance during the postseason.

Sandoval got off to a hot start to begin the 2013 campaign with 35 hits in the month of April, the most by a Giant since 1900. On May 21, 2013, Sandoval hit a walk-off two-run homer to help the Giants defeat the Washington Nationals 4-2. However, he was slowed by a left foot injury, which put him on the disabled list for two weeks from June 9 through June 23. But that didn't stop Sandoval from making more history later in the season.

On Sept. 4, 2013, Sandoval homered three times against the San Diego Padres in a 13-5 Giants victory, which joined him with Ruth, Jackson, Pujols, George Brett, and Adrián Beltré as the only players to have three-homer games in the regular season and playoffs. Sandoval finished the year batting .278 with 146 hits, 14 homers and 79 RBIs.

Even though he got off to a slow start in 2014, Sandoval hit .351 with seven homers and 27 RBIs over a stretch from May 6 to June 21. He finished the year with 16 homers and 73 RBIs while batting .279.

During the 2014 postseason, Sandoval proved himself to be a hero for the Giants once again. In game two of the NLDS against the Washington Nationals, Sandoval hit a game-tying RBI-double in the top of the ninth to send the game into extra innings — the Giants eventually won the game 2-1 and took the series in four games. With the hit, Sandoval extended his NL playoff hitting streak to 13 games.

Sandoval also had a postseason on-base streak that lasted 25 games — it came to an end in game three of the World Series against the Kansas City Royals. In game four of the series, Sandoval went 2-for-5 with a pair of RBIs. It was his 13th multi-hit playoff game, which was the second most in franchise history.

Sandoval recorded his 26th hit of the 2014 postseason in game seven of the World Series, which set a new MLB record for most hits in a single postseason — the record was broken by Randy Arozarena of the Tampa Bay Rays in 2020. Sandoval also recorded the series-clinching put-out at third base, giving the Giants their third World Series ring in five years.

Before the 2015 season, Sandoval signed as a free agent with the Boston Red Sox. The deal was for $90 million over five years.

However, Sandoval's time in Boston did not go as planned.

He only batted .245 with 10 homers and 47 RBIs in 2015, then he missed nearly the entire 2016 season with a shoulder injury.

Sandoval struggled in 2017 as well, batting just .225 in 45 games for the Red Sox before being released. He was picked up by the Giants and began his second-stint with the team on Aug. 5, 2017 and had five homers and 20 RBIs in 47 games.

Sandoval had nine homers and 40 RBIs in 2018. He also led the MLB with 18 pinch-hits, but his most notable single performance on the season came from the mound. On April 28, Sandoval made his pitching debut against the Dodgers and threw a perfect inning by throwing mostly 70 mile-per-hour curveballs.

Sandoval had a bit of a bounce-back season in 2019, batting .268 with 14 homers and 41 RBIs. He also played in 108 games despite being hampered by elbow problems for the majority of the year.

In the shortened 2020 season, Sandoval played in 34 games for the Giants, but was released after batting just .214. He was signed by the Atlanta Braves, but played in just one game.

Sandoval made his first, and only, appearance as a pitcher on April 28, 2018 and retired all three batters he faced. It was the first time a Giants position player pitched a perfect inning since 1965.
