Lincecum punched out Washington Nationals hitter Jerry Hairston Jr. for his 1,000th career strikeout. Lincecum was also an All-Star selection for the fourth straight season.

Lincecum's final record (13-14) was not indicative on the kind of season he had — Lincecum had the worst run support in all of MLB. He struck out 220 hitters over 217 innings and had an ERA of 2.74, which was the fourth best mark in the NL.

Lincecum signed a two-year contract with the Giants worth $40.5 million in the offseason. However, Lincecum's career began its dramatic downturn in 2012.

While Lincecum's violent delivery was one of the reasons he was so successful, pitching experts predicted that his career would be cut short due to his arm's inability to take the stress he was putting on it.

Lincecum had a 3-10 record and a 6.42 ERA at the All-Star break in 2012. He also lost six straight decisions in the first half of the season and was losing velocity on his fastball, as well as command of his pitches. He went from the Giants ace to the back end of the rotation in less than a year.

Lincecum pitched better in the second half of the year and won seven of his last 12 decisions, finishing the year with a 10-15 record and 190 strikeouts. But his ERA nearly doubled (5.18) and he led the NL in losses and wild pitches (17).

Since the Giants only needed four starting pitchers in the playoffs, Lincecum was sent to the bullpen for the 2012 playoffs by manager Bruce Bochy. In game four of the NLDS against the Cincinnati Reds, Lincecum threw 4.1 scoreless innings in relief and earned the win as the Giants defeated the Reds in five games.

After Lincecum threw two hitless innings out of the bullpen in game one of the NLCS against the St. Louis Cardinals, Bochy gave him the start in game four. But Lincecum only lasted 4.2 innings, giving up six runs in the Cardinals 8-3 win. However, the Giants rallied from a 3-1 series deficit to win three straight and advance to their second World Series in three years.

Lincecum was moved back to the bullpen for the World Series against the Detroit Tigers and had a pair of successful outings. He threw a total of 4.2 innings and didn't give up a hit or a run and struck out eight while only walking one — the Giants swept the Tigers in four games to win the World Series once again.

Even though Lincecum was losing his abilities, he was still able to show glimpses of what made him so great. On July 13, 2013, Lincecum threw his first no-hitter against the San Diego Padres, striking out 13, walking four, and throwing a career-high of 148 pitches in a 9-0 victory — it was the first ever no-hitter Petco Park, home of the Padres.

Despite his third straight season with a losing record, Lincecum did put up better marks in 2013, reducing his ERA from 5.18 to 4.37. He also walked 13 less hitters than the previous year and struck out 153.

Less than a year later, Lincecum would throw another no-hitter against the Padres — this time, in front of the home fans at AT&T Park.

On June 25, 2014, Lincecum threw his 10th complete game and his second no-hitter against the Padres, becoming the second player in MLB history to no-hit the same team multiple times.

Less than a month later, Lincecum recorded an extra-inning save against the Phillies, which made him the fifth pitcher since 1976 to record a no-hitter and a save in the same season.

However, Lincecum was replaced in the starting rotation in late-August and never made his way back. Lincecum did, however, earn the 100th win of his career by coming out of the bullpen in a 9-8 win over the Padres on Sept. 25, 2014.

Even though Lincecum was on the Giants play-off roster, he was not used in the NLDS or the NLCS. He made one appearance in game two of the World Series and retired all five batters he faced before leaving the game with lower back pain — the Giants defeated the Kansas City Royals in seven games, giving Lincecum his third championship ring.

Lincecum's last season with the Giants was cut short due to injury in 2015. He had a number of quality outings to begin the season, but on June 27, Lincecum was hit in the pitching elbow off a line drive from DJ LeMahieu and left the game. Just weeks later, Lincecum was diagnosed with a degenerative condition in both of his hips. He eventually had season-ending hip surgery in early-September.

After no team picked him up in free agency, Lincecum signed a one-year deal with the Los Angeles Angels one month into the 2016 season. He started his tenure with the organization in Triple-A, but was called up on June 18, 2016. In his first start with the Angels, Lincecum pitched six innings and gave up just one run to earn the victory against the A's.

But Lincecum would only win one more game for the Angels for the remainder of the season. His ERA went up to 9.16, and after surrendering nine hits and six runs against the Seattle Mariners in 3.1 innings, the Angels released him the following day — it was the last time Lincecum pitched in the majors.

Lincecum sat out the 2017 season, but signed a minor league contract with the Rangers in 2018. However, Lincecum was unimpressive in Triple-A and was released on June 5.

Although he hasn't formally retired, Lincecum hasn't pitched since his release from the Rangers.

Lincecum and Los Angeles Dodgers legend Sandy Koufax are the only two players in MLB history to throw multiple no-hitters, win multiple Cy Young awards, receive multiple All-Star selections and win multiple World Series titles.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING - SOLE-SOURCE PROCUREMENT

NOTICE is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Keizer will hold a public hearing for the purpose of taking comments on the draft findings for a sole-source procurement.

The City of Keizer has made a determination that the selection of WatchGuard as a sole-source procurement for the purpose of purchasing camera systems and software licensing that is essential for replacing Police Department vehicle and motorcycle cameras. 2. The City of Keizer has already been using equipment that is about to become outdated.
3. Purchasing the camera systems and software licensing from WatchGuard will ensure that all police vehicles and motorcycles use the same equipment.

7. It is necessary to order the camera system and software licensing as soon as possible to avoid ramifications that may occur from current equipment becoming outdated.

The City of Keizer will purchase the camera systems

The hearing will be held on February 1, 2021 at 7:00 p.m. at the Robert L. Simon Council Chambers, Keizer Civic Center, 930 Chemawa Road NE, Keizer, Oregon. Copies of the draft findings are available at Keizer City Hall or by contacting the City Recorder at 503-390-3700.
