

Reading, filmed play on deck

For Keizer Homegrown Theatre, the show must always go on.

This month, the troupe will conduct a live reading and hopes to debut a filmed production in the near future.

KHT's next participatory reading will be March 16, at 6:30 p.m. Viewers can log on to participate or simply watch. The reading will be Hannah and the Dread Gazebo by Jiehae Park. Send an email request to keizerhomegrown@gmail.com if you wish to be one of the readers.

The 90-minute play, set in New York City and Korea in the winter of 2011, takes Hannah's Korean American family on a surreal, funny and heartbreaking adventure that involves a FedEx package containing a 100% bona-fide-heart's-desire-level wish and a suicide note. The journey takes the family back to their roots in South and North Korea and the forbidden Demilitarized Zone that divides them.

KHT cast and crew are planning a filmed production of Dating: Adults Embracing Failure by Josh Lanzet & Lindy Voeltner. In a series of comedic vignettes, couples navigate the triumphs and tribulations of dating via the internet.

By selecting real-life couples to act out stand-alone scenes, KHT is limiting the rehearsals to the director and two actors. The play will be filmed start-to-finish using two cameras with the premiere date and ticketing information to be announced.

The couples taking the stage are: Jessica and Tom Cavanaugh; Deborah and Paul Nelson; Katherine and Matthew Otten; Lorian and Eric Schmidt; and Shilah and Sam Tibbits.

For the Keizertimes

We live in a world that has had flying cars and robots that are indistinguishable from humans for at least two years. This advancement has happened despite the perpetual war that has been fought by our totalitarian superstate for over three decades, not to mention the 400% rise in crime that lead to the 1988 transformation of Manhattan into a giant prison. This is the reality of various futures dreamt up in Blade Runner, 1984, and Escape From New York, anyway.

Outside the Wire, a new Netflix movie from a production company you've never heard of, posits that in 2036 America will once again have to save the day from those pesky Russians, this time with the help of androids that look like Anthony Mackie. If this never comes to pass it will not be the first promise that this movie has broken, however; with a boring plot, laughable dialogue, and mediocre acting, Outside the Wire initially seems like it will be a fun action film with thoughtful discussions of passion, logic, and what it means to be human, but what it ends up doing instead is wafting into cinematic nothingness.

The plot as described above is about as interesting as the movie gets. Robo Mackie gets teamed up with a coolly dispassionate drone pilot, and together they are tasked with stopping some Russian guy from getting his hands on some nukes.

About two-thirds of the way through there is a plot twist that you will probably see coming a mile away. And that's... pretty much it. Trite? Absolutely. Fun? Not at all, surprisingly. Movies with thin plots can absolutely work if the vehicle you use to get from point A to point B (the vehicle being dialogue, acting, action, etc.) is entertaining, but the vehicle here is lacking gas.

It's actually pretty impressive how the production team managed to suck all the potential fun out of the premise; the fight scenes (which are, admittedly, pretty cool in a couple of instances) are simply not enough to keep one's interest as deeper themes such as the role passion plays in war are brought up and either eventually forgotten or handled with the grace of a drunk giraffe on a pogo stick.

The dialogue that holds all of it together, on the other hand, often sounds like it was written by a 6-year-old with a dictionary of curse words and only a rudimentary knowledge of how to implement said curse words. I never once thought I was listening to real people talk.

Another reason for this is the acting. I can easily forgive Anthony Mackie for signing on to a movie just so he can play a robot that punches people, but the man often seems like he's there against his will. As for the guy who plays the coolly dispassionate drone pilot? Well, let's just say that he does a poor job of selling the ludicrous script as well. You can play boring and dispassionate without being boring and dispassionate, you know.

One thing we can be sure of when it comes to the future? Nobody will remember Outside the Wire.

Outside the Wire is now available on Netflix.
