

pitches and put in reliever Andrew Baxter, who surrendered two runs in the frame and allowed the Mavericks to tie the game at 4-4 on RBI-hits by Lauderdale and Andrew Castano.

But despite going scoreless in four consecutive innings, the Campesinos saved their best for last in their final at-bats of the contest.

The Mavericks brought their usually reliable closer Travis Edgar to face the bottom half of the Campesinos order.

But Edgar was abnormally wild early in his appearance and issued two walks and beamed a batter to load the bases with nobody out.

A flare off Joseph Nunn's broken bat plated a pair of runs to make the score 6-4. Then, after a sacrifice bunt by Nick Ybarra and an intentional walk issued to Patrick Chung, Bayard wound up scoring on a wild pitch to make the score 7-4.

"We don't play a lot of small-ball but they were ready to do it," Robertson said. "And that set us up for a couple more runs."

Runge added on to the rally with his third hit of the game, a two-run single to give the Campesinos even more insurance.

"They put some really good at-bats together and they just stayed with their approach," Robertson said.

The Campesinos ended up getting the series sweep against the Mavericks to give themselves a four-game lead in the standings.

"We do look at (the standings), but at the end of the day, we can only control what we control. We are more focused on coming out and playing ball," Robertson said. "We just need to keep finding ways to win."

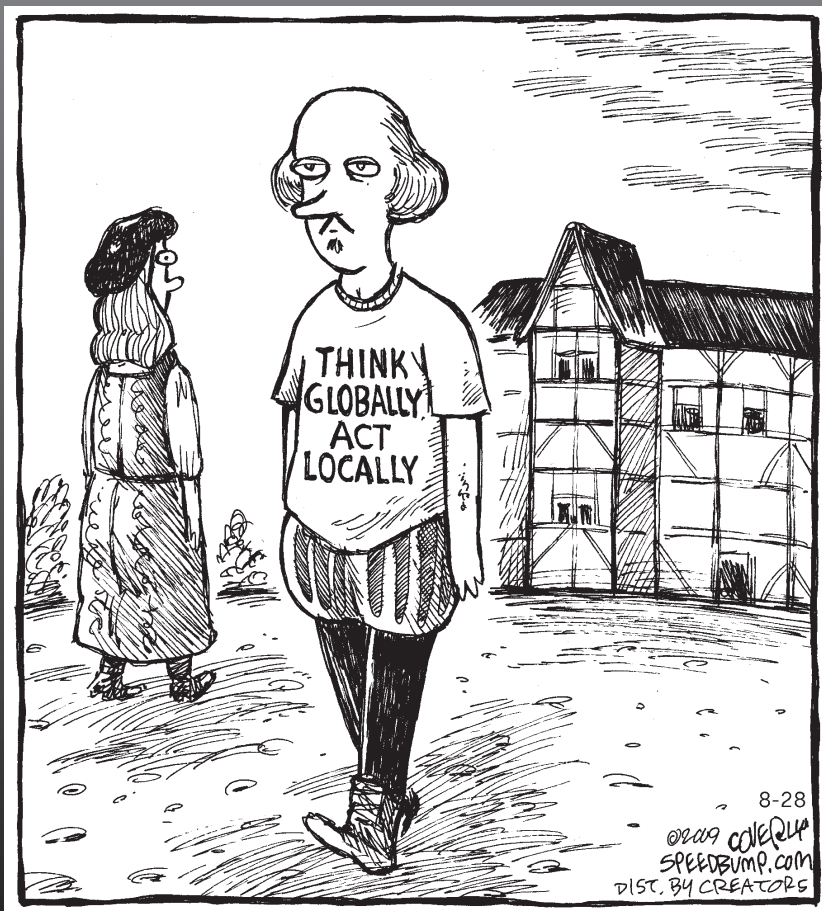

Campesinos lefty Eli Fultz gave up two runs over five innings and struck out nine.
