

Ninjas report included “votes not properly authenticated” and that there are “50,000-plus votes still in serious question.” Biden won Maricopa County by 45,000 votes.

Thatcher also said there were issues with election transparency in Arizona, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, and Georgia and that these states “amount to 56 Electoral votes. Joe Biden was declared president by a margin of 36.” The results were certified in all four of these states.

Thatcher could not provide specific examples of fraud in the 2020 election but said there were “irregular ballots, statistical anomalies and voting laws changed without legislation.”

In response to a question asking if she believed Biden won the 2020 election, Thatcher said, “This question is irrelevant. I do believe there are inconsistencies that need to be addressed.”

The Cyber Ninjas’ audit, which only looked at 2.1 million votes, was reported to have cost $6 million. In response to a question asking if an audit of 159 million votes would be worth the cost to taxpayers, Thatcher said, “Congress has been willing to invest in the elections of foreign nations, and it is fitting to invest taxpayer dollars in public trust by thoroughly auditing our own elections.”

When asked if she was planning on running for secretary of state again, Thatcher said that she is weighing her options “but no decision at this time.”
